Bury Me in Pink.
World Prayer Day.
Easy to Say, Hard to Do.
To Get Things, Fight.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WOMAN'S interest in dress, strong and deep, goes back a million years. She started with a necklace, according to scientists. First an ornament around the neck, then one around the waist, then a skirt and all sorts of things.

A WOMAN in California who murdered a man and killed herself asked to be buried in white satin with yellow roses in her hand.

A well-known actress in New York jumps from a twentieth-story window and makes two requests: first, that she be buried in pink satin; second, that her husband keep away from the funeral.

YESTERDAY was "World Day of Prayer" among Protestants in all lands. Sixteen hundred cities and towns, some as far as Turkey, Syria, Africa and Japan, joined in the prayer.

This time it is not prayer for Russia, but a general prayer for "the redemption of the world."

HOW far do those prayers travel through the ether before they reach their destination? Are they all heard simultaneously by miraculous power, or received and sorted out according to world redemption theories offered? Some world redemption plans must be far apart—those from Africa and Japan, for instance.

HENRY FORD says farmers will solve their problem by "new mass production." Wisely he mentions "machinery, chemistry and education" as the three big factors.

This farmer who raises corn, cow peas, alfalfa, horses, and other things can testify that "mass production farming" advice is easier to give than to take.

Farmers must do their producing on 20,000,000 farms. Henry Ford couldn't establish mass production in 20,000,000 factories.

BEAUTIFUL in sincerity and humility is Gandhi's appeal to the British government: "On bended knees, I ask you to ponder this phenomenon," namely the "impoverishing of India's dumb millions" by Britain.

GANDHI says: "I do not intend to harm a single Englishman." He will only resist passively.

Very touching, but not the attitude that gains independence, not the attitude of a people ready for independence.

BRITAIN set a different example before the Hindus after the Sepoy rebellion.

The British put murderous rebels inside of cannon, and blew them to pieces, knowing that religious superstitution would make the punishment most horrible.

No rebellion of consequence since then.

THE Hindus might learn from the late Emmeline Pankhurst.

She wanted votes for women, and SHE FOUGHT ENGLISHMEN.

She attacked them physically, chained herself to the iron railing of the House of Parliament, that the police might not drag her away. When they sent her to prison she starved, and would have died, except that shame compelled the British to release her.

ON THURSDAY, the British, with Mr. Baldwin presiding, unveiled a statue to Mrs. Pankhurst, close to the spot where she had chained herself to the steel railing. AND BRITISH WOMEN VOTE.

To get what you want, fight for it.

ONE industry marches on to higher and higher figures.

In the cigaret business, prosperity reigns. Everybody always has money to buy cigarets.

When employment is lacking there is leisure to smoke more cigarets, and all feel that they must have them, job or no job.

LAST year's production was 119,000,000,000 cigarets—almost a thousand cigarets per year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

ONE thing most important to all business men in connection with the gigantic cigaret industry. Cigaret men are the most AGGRESSIVE, ENERGETIC AND CONTINUOUS ADVERTISERS in the nation.

MONEY is cheap—Wall Street was correspondingly cheerful. For money to build a house, you had to pay six and sometimes eight per cent.

To speculate in stocks you could borrow money for three and a half per cent.

On soft green fields in the countryside and and on the hard sidewalks of Wall Street, a new crop of lambs will soon be skipping. Spring lamb for restaurants, spring lambs for bears.

THE Farm Board intends to continue buying wheat, hoping to "push the price back near the $1.18 loan price."

That has a sad sound for farmers who thought Uncle Sam and the board would arrange to get them at least $2.

The board warns wicked speculators not to take advantage by buying at low prices and selling to their Uncle Sam.

DAVIS HERE, CANDIDACY DELAYED

'Nothing to Say for Day Or Two,' Secretary Says, Awaiting Vare Statement

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis arrived here today and said he "would have nothing to say for a day or two."

It was learned that Davis made arrangements months ago to deliver speeches to civic groups in various sections, and it is believed that his postponement of announcement is due to a desire not to appear before those groups as a candidate for office. His immediate engagements are in Landsdale, Pa.; Trenton, N. J., and in New York City. Upon the completion of these engagements he probably will make formal announcement.

Davis made it clear that his announcement would not be governed by William S. Vare's candidacy.

Davis left Philadelphia last night after meeting members of the political "war board" of that city who were reported to be urging William S. Vare to withdraw from the Senate race and throw his support to Davis for senator and Francis Shunk Brown for govefnor.

Reports from Philadelphia last night hinted at the possibility of Davis announcing today his candidacy either in Pittsburgh or from the home of his father in Sharon, Pa. Contrary to widespread reports, Davis said he did not talk with Vare himself while meeting the Philadelphian's lieutenants.

GOES TO SHARON TODAY

Davis said he would leave for Sharon later today but did not expect to announce for the present. "I have plenty of time before March 31," he declared, referring evidently to the last day for filing nomination petitions.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong arrived home last night after a brief vacation in Florida. He left about 10 days ago and was expected to be absent three weeks.

ARMSTRONG SILENT

Armstrong has been inaccessible for questioning as to his choice between a Davis-Brown ticket and one headed by Senator Joseph R. Grundy, seeking re-election, and Samuel S. Lewis as candidate for governor. A number of local politicians predicted that Armstrong

Erlanger Kin Preparing to Fight 'Widow'

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—Litigation over the millions of Abraham Lincoln Erlanger, czar of the theater, was forecast today by contradictory statements as to whether he left a widow.

Erlanger, 69, died yesterday at his apartment on Riverside drive. The superintendent of the apartment building told reporters:

"Mrs. Erlanger has issued instructions she is not to be disturbed by reporters or anybody else."

"There is no Mrs. Erlanger," said Abraham's brother, Mitchell L. Erlanger, retired justice of the State Supreme Court. "There is no widow. What I am telling you is 100 per cent the truth."

Max D. Steuer announced he had been retained as attorney for "Mrs. Erlanger, in whose arms Abraham L. Erlanger died in the Riverside drive apartment."

RECORDS CLAIMED

Informed of Mitchell Erlanger's statement, Steuer said:

"Every department store in New York has charge accounts in the name of Mrs. Erlanger with the Riverside drive address."

He added that hotel records in New York and Atlantic City and transportation arrangements made by Erlanger's confidential employes also would make it easy to prove there was a Mrs. Erlanger. He estimated Erlanger's estate at $75,000,000.

At his death Erlanger was the largest individual owner and operator of legitimate theaters in the country. Formerly the firm of Klaw and Erlanger virtually controlled the drama, but the firm dissolved in 1919.

FUNERAL PLANNED

Besides a brother, Erlanger leaves two sisters, Miss Ray Erlanger and Mrs. Caroline Bergman.

Mitchell Erlanger said that his brother had been divorced from Mrs. Adelaide Erlanger on December 23, 1911. The marriage was July 5, 1891.

Steuer said that Erlanger met the present Mrs. Erlanger 26 years ago. She was formerly Miss Charlotte Fiscal, he said.

From the Riverside Drive apartment Erlanger's body was taken to his brother's home on East Seventieth street to await the funeral tomorrow. There will be services in Temple Emanuel on Fifth avenue.

HOOVER SEES PROSPERITY REVIVAL

Job Crisis Waning, Money Plentiful, Trade Gaining, President Finds in Survey

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—American business is passing out of the valley of depression into which it was plunged by the November stocks crash and is starting the long climb up prosperity hill again.

Unemployment, which has been distressing in a dozen states, is on the wane; the volume of building and construction this year promises to be greater than ever; money is cheap and plentiful, and by May 1, at the latest, the country will have substantially recovered from the partial paralysis to its business nerves during the winter months.

The foregoing represents President Hoover's estimate of the national business and industrial situation. He arrived at it after a survey of reports from industries and sources that in the past have proven barometrical as to national conditions.

BUILDING SHOWS GAINS

One of these is the building industry. It has been Mr. Hoover's observation, in almost 10 years of keeping his finger on the national business pulse, that when the building industry is booming, business generally is good. The ramifications of the business industry extend into almost every other line—steel, lumber, cement, paint and various manufacturing lines.

"Construction contracts in January and February were from 40 to 45 per cent higher than ever known in these months," the President said, "and the total construction work for 1930 seems assured to be larger than even 1929." Last year was a banner year.

Moreover, building activity spells increased employment, not alone in the building trades themselves, which have been hard hit during the winter, but in the related lines of materials. Unemployment in the unionized building trades since November reached a peak of 40 per cent.

The working of the natural

Coolidges and Davis Head Notables Visiting City

A half dozen of the nation's most distinguished persons were in Pittsburgh today.

Foremost were former President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who arrived at 7:45 a. m., en route from the Pacific Coast to their home in Massachusetts. They left at 9:10 a. m.

A crowd gathered at the Pennsylvania Station to greet the former occupants of the White House, but neither Mr. nor Mrs. Coolidge left their private car, Glen Luce, during its stop here.

A few minutes after the Coolidge train arrived, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, a member of the former President's cabinet, reached here from Philadelphia. He called to pay his respects to his one-time chief and to Mrs. Coolidge.

Davis and Coolidge remained in conference for more than 15 minutes while the train was being coupled up for the journey to New York.

Ten minutes before the train departed the former president and Mrs. Coolidge entered the dining car for breakfast.

The former first lady of the land was dressed in a handsome gown of the famous Coolidge and Harding blue and nodded to other diners in the car.

A short time before the Coolidges arrived former Gov. Pinchot reached here over the Baltimore and Ohio.

Vice President Charles Curtis was aboard a westbound train stopping here for a few minutes during the night.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, dry leader from Iowa, and the radio comedians, Amos 'n' Andy, were here yesterday.

3 GIRLS, RUM INVOLVED IN STORY

Police Find Victim Sitting In Swing on Sun Porch Of Squirrel Hill Home

Newell Gibson, 24, Carnegie Tech chemistry instructor, was shot and seriously wounded early today after a drinking party, police say, in which girls participated, at the home of Walter O. Krebs, 10 Dunmoyle place.

Gibson was shot through the stomach, the bullet emerging from his back and piercing a window sash in Krebs' bedroom, police reported.

At Homeopathic Hospital, physicians said Gibson was on the operating table "with a chance to recover."

TWO BEING HELD

Police say that Krebs, a night student at Tech and a research engineer at the United States Bureau of Mines, at first admitted the shooting, but later denied it.

Krebs and E. H. Bane, 25, a law student at the University of Pittsburgh, are being held at the East End Police Station.

According to Bane's statement to police, Krebs invited him and Gibson to a party in the Krebs home last night. Krebs' family is in Florida. Krebs and Gibson had been college mates at Yale and were old friends, according to Bane.

GIRLS LEAVE PARTY

Bane and Gibson went to the party from their rooms in the Downtown Y. M. C. A., the former told police. Three Pittsburgh girls, whose names Bane would not disclose, were present for several hours during the evening. They were taken home in Krebs' automobile at 1:30 o'clock this morning, five hours before the shooting occurred, Bane asserted.

Bane went to sleep in a bedroom adjoining Krebs' room, he informed police.

"I was awakened by a muffled sort of sound, but wasn't sure it was a shot," Bane told police.

CALLS FOR DOCTOR

"Then I heard Gibson calling my name and moaning, 'I've been shot. Get a doctor, quick.'"

Bane said he called the physicians' exchange and asked for an ambulance and doctor. A West Penn Hospital ambulance responded, but before it arrived, Gibson had been placed in a commandeered automobile and rushed to Homeopathic Hospital by police, who had arrived in the meantime in response to a telephone call.

Patrolmen John Kennington and John Nugent, of the Squirrel Hill station, reported that when they arrived at the Krebs home, they found Gibson sitting on the edge of a wicker swing on the sun porch, on the first floor.

"What happened?" asked Patrolman Kennington, he reported.

"I am shot," replied Gibson.

"Who shot you?"

"Walter Krebs," was Gibson's reply, according to police.

Police aided Gibson outdoors.

OWNERS SILENT ON TAXI PEACE

Representatives of the taxicab owners today were considering the offer of settlement submitted yesterday by the striking drivers through Mayor Charles H. Kline.

Attorney C. K. Robinson, counsel for the Parmelee Transportation Company, owner of the Yellow and Green cabs, indicated there would be no hurried action.

"I am authorized to say that the company cannot act immediately," said Robinson. "We must go into the matter thoroughly."

Mayor Kline again acted as intermediary as the strikers submitted their counter proposal yesterday. A. T. Sifford, chairman of the strikers' committee; Attorney Leonard A. Mazer, counsel for the cab drivers, and Miss M. Emmilinne Pitt, federal labor conciliator, presented the proposal.

Mayor Kline in turn presented the proposal to Attorneys Robinson and Frank B. Ingersoll, counsel for the Parmelee Transportation Company. These functions were performed by the Mayor at separate conferences yesterday afternoon.

After the conferences Mayor Kline said:

"The men presented the proposal to me. I gave it to the

NEW AIR MAIL LINE PLANNED

Bids will be asked within three weeks for the establishment of a new air mail and passenger route between Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Thomas E. Bourne, superintendent of the airway extension of the Department of Commerce, authorized the announcement before leaving Pittsburgh for the East, according to C. Ross Griffith, of the Mono Aircraft Corporation.

Allegheny County's airport will be the landing field for local service. Mail from Pittsburgh for New York will be tansferred at Philadelphia.

Hurt Driving Taxi, Student Sues Union

Phillip Wagner, a Carnegie Tech student, injured while driving a cab during the strike, has entered suit for $265,000 against officers and members of the Taxicab Union. The suit, filed by Weil, Christy & Weil, asks $65,000 damages for injuries and $200,000 exemplary and punitive damages. Wagner suffered a skull fracture when the cab he was driving February 14 was stoned. Local and international officers of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America are named in the suit.

MOTHER BALKS ELOPEMENT

COLUMBUS, O., March 8.—Veronica Hope Kelly, 19, of 240 Morrison avenue, Mt. Lebanon, Pittsburgh suburb, was taken in custody by police here last night at the request of her mother, Mrs. Julia C. Kelly, to prevent her marriage. Mrs. Kelly arrived today to take the daughter back to Pittsburgh.

Score Hurt as Fire Follows Bus Crash

KIRKWOOD, Ill., March 8.—(AP.)—A score of passengers was injured, one perhaps fatally, when two buses carrying players and fans back to Galesburg from a basketball tournament at Burlington, Iowa, crashed and burned near here early today.

When the leading bus failed to make a turn and careened widely, the trailing conveyance crashed into it. The gasoline tank of the latter was broken and the fuel burst into flames.

Many of the 43 occupants of both buses were burned before they could get out. Others suffered broken limbs and bruises.

Waiting Is Tiresome, So He Abducts Trolley Car

Stolen: one trolley car.

It happened today about 1:30 a. m.

Somebody slipped into the Plummer street carbarn in Lawrenceville and sped away in a big, roomy Butler street conveyance.

Thirty minutes later that same car was rollicking up downtown Sixth avenue, which is three or four miles from Plummer street, at a pretty pace.

At Sixth and Wylie the trolley wire slipped off.

Two curious patrolmen arrived and the ride was ended.

In Central Police Court today the "motorman" said:

"I don't know anything about it."

He was Andrew Mulholland, 38, of 4123 Butler street. Mr. Mulholland's vocation is piloting a crane, which probably can't run faster than 12 miles an hour.

The police told of finding a half-pint of moonshine in the possession of Mr. Mulholland.

There was mystery attached to the ride. Railways employes said they hadn't seen the car being driven out and nobody was able to testify how the vehicle had reached downtown.

When he was arrested Mr. Mulholland said: "I got tired waiting for a street car, so I just took one."

COALITION HITS GRUNDY AS RANKS SPLIT OVER TARIFF

SEEK TO BAR OFFICE TO LOBBYIST

Bitter Battle Rages as New 'Billion Dollar' Combine Shakes Insurgent Program

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Its march of victory in the tariff war shattered by a new "billion dollar" high tariff alliance, the Democratic-Insurgent coalition in the Senate turned its attention today to driving lobbyists out of the Senate office building.

The Coalition planned to sponsor a resolution excluding "all lobbyists" from the office of Senator Joseph R. Grundy (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, so-called "granddaddy of all lobbyists" and archpriest of protection. The resolution really will be aimed at Warren F. Doane, Grundy's confidential assistant and editor of the Manufacturer, a Pennsylvania protariff publication. Grundy twice told the Senate Doane was only a visitor to his offices but Doane told the Lobby Investigating Committee he was using Grundy's office and was on the Pennsylvanian's payroll at $500 a month, while drawing $5,000 a year in his editorial job.

PLOT CHARGED

The assault on Grundy had considerable ill-feeling behind it. Most Coalition leaders have held Grundy responsible for the "trading" and "deals" by which the Senate reversed itself to increase the tariff on sugar and place a duty on cement. It was charged in debate that this combination of sugar, oil, and lumber interests had made an agreement with the cement, brick, glass, hides and leather interests to support higher tariffs on each other's articles. Thus far, the sugar and cement interests have profited, with votes expected next week on the other items.

Senator McMaster (Rep.), of South Dakota, charged this combine would increase the cost of living by $1,000,000,000 a year if it won all its prospective fights.

The Coalition leaders meanwhile prepared for another vote on both the sugar and cement rates.

LEADERS ANGERED

On cement, the Senate first removed a duty of eight cents levied by the House and restored it to the free list. Then, after the combine went into action, it forced another reversal when five senators changed their votes, and levied a duty of six cents per hundred pounds—about 31 cents a barrel.

These two reversals of sentiment, the switching of votes, and the apparent trading of support thoroughly angered Coalition leaders. They apparently intended to vent their wrath on Grundy. At last night's session, Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, went so far in discussing the occupancy of Grundy's office by tariff lobbyists as to point a finger at the Pennsylvanian and threaten to "get rid of the unseen and unclean hands behind this tariff bill." Blaine charged Grundy with "concealing facts" behind Doane's employment, the usual senatorial manner of voicing the short and ugly way.

The bad feeling, however, may alter the entire situation at any moment. There was a possibility that the Coalition might change tactics at any moment, launch a filibuster and very likely defeat the bill. Otherwise, it should pass the Senate next week.

BLONDE LOSES 2 LAWYERS

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 8.—(INS.)—While word was expectantly awaited from Special State Prosecutor Charles J. Margioti today as to whether Mrs. Irene Schroeder, blonde "trigger woman" and murder suspect, or her partner, Glenn Dague, would go on trial first when the case opens Monday, it was learned that former Judge W. P. Barnum and Attorney Oscar Stephens had dropped from the array of legal [illegible] which was to defend the pair.

Coming on the eve of the trial, an air of mystery surrounds the withdrawal of the two attorneys.

The lawyers, both from Youngstown, O., were Irene's first choices in her fight to overcome the state's fight against her. They now are out of the trial for at least 10 days. Both gave the excuse that press of other business called them away.

That a surprise defense, abandoning the plans already advanced, may be used by the pair's attorneys was indicated today by Thomas M. Dickey, of New Castle, who said defense counsel had completed its plans and was confident of the outcome.

would throw his support to his close personal and political friend, Secretary Davis.

Armstrong was reported to have conferred last week in Florida with Davis and Vare.

Vare to Announce Support of Davis

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—(AP.—William S. Vare is preparing to announce his formal withdrawal as a candidate for the United States Senate, and his support of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for the senatorial nomination and former Attorney General Francis Shunk Brown for the governorship, Republican leaders declared here today.

Before making the anticipated announcement, Mr. Vare, who arrived in Philadelphia late yesterday from his winter home in St. Lucie, Fla., today will undergo a thorough physical examination by Dr. Ellwood R. Kirby to determine whether his physical condition is such that he can enter and go through with a strenuous political campaign.

Before leaving for Pittsburgh on the 11:35 train last night, Secretary Davis said:

"If and when I shall announce my candidacy will depend on my talks in Pittsburgh. My course will not depend in the least on what Mr. Vare does."

P. R. R. BATTLES NEW RAIL LINE

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Railroad plans to seek a court order enjoining the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway Company from constructing its Donora extension in Washington County, Pennsylvania, which was approved February 7 by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission today extended to March 24 the effective date of its order at the request of the Pennsylvania Railroad to permit filing of the proceedings.

The Pittsburgh and West Virginia proposed to build the six-mile Donora extension to connect its Connellsville branch with the Donora Southern Railroad, giving it an entrance into Donora where the American Steel and Wire Company is located.

PINCHOT HERE, SHUNS POLITICS

Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot arrived in Pittsburgh this morning to attend the funeral of Judge Richard W. Martin.

Owing to the nature of his visit, Pinchot said he would not discuss his possible candidacy for governor although that question is giving great concern to local politicians.

He was met at the station by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and Attorney Ralph H. Frank. Accompanying him was secretary, Stephen Stalnaker.

Pinchot was here about 10 days ago for the funeral of Ambassador A. P. Moore, and remained the next day to exhibit motion pictures of his South Sea sailing trip.

He studiously avoided any public comment of his political intentions, although he conferred with scores of friends in this end of the state on the trend of political sentiment, particularly as it might be reflected with two organization tickets in the field.

BRIAND HOLDS KEY TO NAVAL PARING

Britain, Japan, U. S. Await Parley With New Leader Over Anglo-French Snarl

LONDON, March 8.—(AP.)—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister and naval delegation head, was the key figure today in the further negotiations of the five naval powers to limit, and possibly reduce, naval armaments.

The United States and Great Britain have reached virtual understanding on a limitation arrangement permitting "parity" between them, and, while Japan still is holding out for a higher cruiser ratio than the United States has been willing to grant, few doubt that a compromise arrangement also is within reach there.

But M. Briand, who has just returned with a French representation after an absence of three weeks, presents a problem of another color. His government demands a naval tonnage considered excessive by Great Britain, or the alternative of political pacts or arrangements guaranteeing French security as the price of limitation at a lower figure.

CONFERS WITH BRIAND

Ramsay MacDonald, British Prime Minister and chairman of the naval conference, who professes optimism as to the outcome of the negotiations, will confer with M. Briand on the general status of the conference and on the Anglo-French relationship Sunday afternoon, prior to a radio address to America at 5:30 p. m. (12:30 p. m., Pittsburgh time).

While Mr. MacDonald and M. Briand are conferring with regard to the Anglo-French relationship, the Americans and Japanese will be engaged in discussions to determine how large Japan's navy shall be with regard to that of the United States, both representatives recognizing that any figures agreed upon may be subjected to revision upward if the French figures are not brought down.

STIMSON STAYS IN LONDON

Secretary of State Stimson, who usually goes to Warren House, Stanmore, for the week-end, remained overnight in London with view to possibility of another discussion of the American-Japanese problem with Reijiro Wakatsuki, Japanese delegation head, with whom he conferred yesterday. A separate meeting between Senator Reed and Ambassador Matsudaira also was probable.

Some conference observers accepted the American-Japanese situation as clearing up rapidly.

Swissvale Council, Burgess Make Peace

Swissvale police were functioning in full force today, following a declaration of peace between Council and Burgess W. T. Pyle. The hatchet was buried only after a three-hour verbal battle at a meeting of Council last night, with President George Fitzpatrick acting as peacemaker. The department had been disturbed when Police Chief William S. Campbell suspended Lieut. Thomas Cummings and was in turn suspended.

NOTABLES JOIN MARTIN RITES

Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot and many others prominent in state and national life were in Pittsburgh today to attend the funeral of Judge Richard W. Martin, of Common Pleas Court. Pinchot appointed Judge Martin to the Public Service Commission several years ago, later naming him to Common Pleas Court.

Services were to be held this afternoon in Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Judge Martin was a member. Interment was to be in Homewood Cemetery. The funeral sermon was to be preached by the Rev. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of the church.

The disturbance that was centered over Kentucky yesterday morning advanced eastward to the Atlantic coast, increasing further in intensity. The lowest barometer reported this morning is 29.06 inches, at New York City. The skies are still overcast over the country east of the Mississippi as a result of the low pressure, and rain is falling over the Middle Atlantic states and at scattered places adjacent thereto. The rainfall for the last 24 hours was moderately heavy along the path of the disturbance. The Northwestern low pressure area is moving eastward south of the border. It is now centered over Central Saskatchewan, and covers the entire Northwest section. A ridge of high barometer stretches from north of Lake Superior southwestward over the Mississippi Valley states and the central plains to Texas. It is attended by clear skies mostly and moderately cold weather. The temperatures are falling throughout the Ohio Valley states.

Mayor Kline explained that he has been made spokesman for both sides.

"We may know the answer today or Monday. It will come from me and I hope it will be soon," he said.

After the conferences Siford said:

Attorneys Ingersoll and Robinson said:

"We cannot say anything. The Mayor will make any statements that are to be made."

Asked for details of the proposal Mayor Kline said:

"There is only one copy of the proposal. Until a decision is made it is absolutely secret."

Prior to the conferences the strikers' comittee spent all day in conference at Attorney Mazer's office. Several committeemen and Chairman Siford were absent from the morning session on account of illness. All but two of the 14 committeemen attended the afternoon session. The absentees Sidney Olcott and B. J. Dean.

DRY TALK HERE BY BROOKHART

Warning that heads of the Prohibition Enforcement Bureau have failed to enforce the dry laws will be deposed as a result of the Senate's investigation into irregularities of the bureau, was given last night by Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa. He spoke in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, McKeesport, under auspices of the Brotherhood Bible Class of the church.

"We are going to modify the prohibition laws—we are going to make them much stronger," he declared. "Prohibition is the greatest victory we got out of the World War. It can be enforced. I've enforced it, and I know.

"What this country needs is more men like Administrator John D. Pennington and Smedley D. Butler. Aided by judges and prosecuting attorneys who live up to their oaths, they could enforce the dry laws to the last letter."

Concerning a man's home being his castle, he said:

"You have read a lot about a man's home being his castle, and that it shouldn't be searched for liquor, and all that. Well, a home ceases to be a home when it turns into a bootlegger's home. This thing of shedding tears over a bootlegger is a waste of tearful brine."

DRY PATROL ASKED FOR BORDERS

Treasury Bill Seeks Army Of 2,000 to War on Booze And Other Smuggling

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Despite the failure of Congress to act on two recommendations of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission to better prohibition enforcement, the Treasury is planning to submit a bill next week to create a unified border patrol army of 2,000 men, it was learned today.

The new plan is designed to raise additional barriers to the smuggling of rum, aliens and merchandise on both the Canadian and Mexican borders by the establishment of a semi-military organization modeled after the famous Canadian mounted police.

"I am informed by those preparing the bill for the Treasury that it will be submitted within a few days," said Representative Parker, (Dem.), of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, who is expected to handle the legislation.

HAS HOOVER BACKING

The border patrol would weld the present Coast Guard force, prohibition agents, customs patrol men, immigration agents and others into one unit. The plan was recommended by President Hoover and the Wickersham commission.

Dry leaders were aroused today over the prediction made in the House by Representative Bachmann, (Rep.) of West Virginia, that the Wickersham commission's "juryless trial" plan to speed prohibition enforcement would fail.

Representative Christopherson, (Dem.) of South Dakota, chairman of the Judiciary Sub-committee in charge of the commission's bills, declined to agree with Bachmann, also a member of the sub-committee.

The Wickersham commission has approved in principle his substitute plan, which would extend the court commissioner proposal to all minor offenses, as well as prohibition, he said.

Under Christopherson's bills, defendants could waive jury trials in all offenses involving not over six months imprisonment.

AWAITS TARIFF ACTION

The transfer bill, in charge of a Senate Judiciary Sub-committee headed by Senator Overman (Dem.), of North Carolina, will be taken up when the tariff bill is passed.

Representative Williamson (Rep.), of South Dakota, who piloted the bill through the House, said that objections raised by physicians had been overcome in a conference with representatives of the American Medical Society. Physicians from all parts of the country protested the bill would take away their privilege of keeping 12 pints of liquor in their offices. The bill does not do this, Williamson said.

hailed an automobile and had him taken to the hospital.

LIQUOR REPORTED

Returning to the Krebs home, Officer Kennington reported, he found Krebs in a den on the third floor, under the influence of liquor. Bane was on the second floor.

Bane informed police that Gibson had come downstairs while he was telephoning for a physician.

A .45 caliber revolver, with one shell discharged, was found in Krebs' den, police said. Krebs, they asserted, admitted he had fired the shot which wounded Gibson, but later changed his story. When confronted with the revolver with one empty shell, he told police he had discharged the weapon while cleaning it.

EXPERT MARKSMAN

According to detectives, Krebs was an expert marksman and a student of firearms. Five revolvers, three rifles and a shotgun were found in his room. The revolvers were confiscated.

Bottles containing gin and whisky were found on the kitchen sink, police said.

Bane insisted that the three girls who were present last night had departed long before the shooting. Police indicated they would demand the names of the girls in event of Gibson's death.

Gibson's home is in Arkansas. Bane's parents reside in Uniontown, Pa.

OUIJA BOARD 'TALKS' TO INDIAN

Model, Infatuated With Marchand, Accused of Plot Leading to Mate's Death

International News Service.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 8.—Lilac Jimerson, 35-year-old Indian model, used a Ouija board to convince Nancy Bowen, 66-year-old widow of an Indian chief, she should kill Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, wife of Henry Marchand, prominent artist, authorities said today.

Both Lilac and Mrs. Bowen were held in jail here charged with murdering the artist's wife, who was found dead in her home yesterday. The younger woman, infatuated with Marchand, for whom she had posed, told Mrs. Bowen in Ouija board messages, the authorities said, that Mrs. Marchand had caused the death of her husband, Chief Charley Sassafras Bowen, several years ago and that to protect her tribesmen she "must kill Mrs. Marchand." Police claimed both women confessed the murder.

Police said Lilac persuaded Mrs. Bowen to accompany her to the Marchand home, and while the younger woman remained outside, the widow entered and choked to death Mrs. Marchand, beating her with a hammer and then stuffed a paper wad, saturated with chloroform, down her victim's throat.

After Mrs. Bowen was enticed into playing the Ouija board, hints were dropped for weeks that the chief's death was really murder. Finally a message came telling Mrs. Bowen to go to the Marchand home and kill Mrs. Marchand, police said. The woman also received letters purporting to come from spiritualists urging her to kill Mrs. Marchand to save the lives of other Indians.

Both Mrs. Bowen and Lilac were seen near the Marchand home yesterday at about the time of the murder, according to police.

OFFER REWARD IN BOMBING

INDIANA, Pa., March 8.—While County Detective Harry Koozer and members of the State Police were following a fresh trail of bootleggers suspected of bombing the home of District Attorney L. Earl Miller, of Indiana County, carpenters and glaziers today were repairing eight residences which were damaged by the blast. The Miller home is so badly damaged that it will have to be rebuilt.

The search for the responsible parties was spurred by the announcement that a reward of $2,000 had been offered by the Indiana County Commissioners for the arrest of the guilty party.

It was estimated that the damage suffered by the various householders would exceed $12,000. All furniture on the first floor of the Miller house was wrecked and household effects in the home of Mrs. Nancy Fleming, Miller's mother-in-law, were damaged, causing a loss of about $1,000. The dwelling of Wilbur Carnahan, adjoining that of Miller, also was badly damaged.

LINDY TO GLIDE IN SECRET

PEBBLE BEACH, Cal., March 8.—(INS.)—In his effort to escape the old bugaboo—curious crowds—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today planned a secret glider flight from some unfrequented spot, near here.

Only his closest associates were told last night where he expects to launch the sail plane, Anne Lindbergh. The Colonel did not state whether he would attempt his projected long distance hop today should the weather conditions prove favorable.

Because he feared a forced landing might injure some of hundreds of persons who gathered yesterday near Carmel, Lindbergh decided to cancel his plans for a short flight in the motorless ship.

"I have always believed that I was safer in the seat of an airplane than in the saddle of a horse," Lindbergh commented on his spill from a polo horse Thursday afternoon.

"There was nothing to it," he declared, "outside of the fact that it was so funny."

HOLMES MARKS 89TH BIRTHDAY

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(INS.)—Defying age and pain and scorning the theory that man can become too old to be useful, Oliver Wendell Holmes, associate justice of the Supreme Court, ranked by many as one of the great jurists of all time, today observed his eighty-ninth birthday. For him it was just another day, except that into his somber brick house on I street poured messages of congratulations from all parts of the world.

There was no celebration — no vacation. The oldest member of the court, and senior in point of service, he will continue to write his vigorous opinions—frequently dissents from the majority—until death or illness prevents, his friends say.

The venerable jurist is declared to be in the best health he has enjoyed for the last three years. He not only produces his quota of work but delivers many more opinions than some of his junior associates.

Stolen Monkey Mysteriously Returned

At 4 o'clock this morning the telephone beside Sergt. John Rhall in the detective bureau rang and a woman's voice said:

"Someone has stolen my monkey."

"What?" shouted Rhall, his eyes popping.

"Yes, my darling Jiggs," the voice continued. "He's a blue ring-tailed monkey with a white face. I must get him back."

Detectives jumped on the case as if it had been a double murder, but before they had time to put on their gum shoes and green whiskers the monkey was mysteriously returned to the owner, Mrs. May Gordon, of 25 East Lacock street, by a messenger boy.

Mrs. Gordon said she suspected two friends of stealing the monkey as a prank.

NEWMINE UNION STRIKES SNAG

Harry Fishwick, John Brophy and their associates in the movement to wrest control of the United Mine Workers from John L. Lewis, international president, are meeting with little success in recruiting delegates for their convention. This is according to the National Miners' Union, the rival organization formed in June, 1928, by secession from the U. M. W., and maintaining national headquarters in Pittsburgh.

The Fishwick - Brophy group, which will meet in Springfield, Ill., Monday, declares that the Lewis group has violated the constitution of the organization and is no longer in authority. On the same day Lewis and his leutenants will meet in Indianapolis and, if expectations are fulfilled, formally expel Fishwick and his adherents from the union.

Asked how many delegates would go from Pittsburgh to the Springfield meeting, Brophy said he preferred not to say.

The Pittsburgh delegates to the Indianapolis convention will occupy a special car.

Vincent Kemenovich, Pittsburgh secretary of the National Miners' Union, declared today that the delegation going to Indianapolis did not represent the miners of the Pittsburgh district.

According to Kemenovich, the National Miners' Union now has 42 functioning locals in the Pittsburgh district and is much stronger than the United Mine Workers.

The National Miners' Union, it was learned today, has enlarged its scope to take in metal miners as well as coal diggers and has affiliated with the British Coal Miners' Union. It will hold a convention in Pittsburgh in June, the first since it was organized. The organization has announced that it plans to call a strike of both bituminous and anthracite miners on September 1, when the five-year wage agreement of the anthracite workers with the operators will expire.

Fords Do Old-Fashioned Dance for Mountaineers

MOUNT BERRY, Ga., March 8.—(AP.)—Henry Ford's own dancing instructors are teaching the mountain boys and girls of Georgia the old fashioned dances of their mothers and fathers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford personally demonstrated the steps of the dances of yesteryear and were applauded several minutes by the admiring students. The ease and grace of the Fords brought forth praise from the youthful students who stood along the walls of the huge girls' school gymnasium to watch the demonstration.

The Fords, Sir Wilfred Grenville, noted scientist, and Lady Grenville, have been here inspecting the Berry Schools as the guests of the institution exclusively for the sons and daughters of the country.

Several days before the arrival of the manufacturer and his party, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Levett, Mr. Ford's dancing instructors, came to the schools to teach the students the quaint old quadrille, mazurka and waltz, famous among the older generation.

And too, Mr. Ford sent along his string orchestra with its Hungarian cymbalon and the dulcimer. The school musicians joined in and the musicians of the moderns and those of "ye olden days," have been playing together.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Former Pittsburgh Girl To Marry Englishman In East March 22

WEDDINGS, and rumors of weddings fill the air these tentative spring days, and engagement announcements, too. The prospect of so many spring weddings is quite exciting, don't you find?

And news of weddings dominates everything in the social world. Not only do we have weddings here at home, but from time to time we hear of marriages of former Pittsburgh folks.

From Stockbridge, Mass., comes news of the wedding plans of Louise H. Osborne, soprano singer, daughter of the Royal Allen Osbornes, of White Lodge, Stockbridge, formerly of Pittsburgh, and Gilbert Stanley, of London, England.

AND the wedding date is Saturday, March 22. The ceremony will take place that afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Mr. Stanley arrived in New York yesterday. He is a son of Mrs. William Stanley, of Great Barrington, and the late Mr. Stanley, an electrical inventor. Mr. Stanley and his five brothers were graduated from Yale. The bridegroom-elect and his twin brother, Clarence, by the way, were graduated in the same class, that of 1919.

Will Wed March 22

The bride-elect has been engaged in concert and church work for a number of years. To refresh your memories I might add that she has a sister Nancy and two brothers, Loyal A. Osborne, Jr., and John S. Osborne.

IT seems to me that the month of March is bringing news of as many betrothals as June brings weddings. Today I heard that Mrs. William C. Hagen, of Aylesboro avenue, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Margaret Hagen, to Theodore Gregg Brown, son of Mrs. Elmer Collins Brown, of Chicago.

TODAY the William G. Moores, of Thorn street, Sewickley, sail on the Adriatic for a Mediterranean cruise, and when they reach Naples they plan to cease cruising and visit Italy, France and Switzerland for several months, and will return here early in the summer.

Travels Varied

And on March 15 the Elmore A. Willets, of Beaver road, Sewickley, with their children, are sailing from New York for Italy on the steamer Conte de Grand. The Easter season will be spent in Spain, and after that they plan to travel all over the continent for two months.

Did you know that Mrs. William Penn Snyder, but recently returned from Europe, is in New York? She is registered at the Berkshire, too, I happen to know.

AND did you know that the Alexander Davidsons, of Sewickley Heights, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth? She is betrothed to Joseph E. Lee, of New York.

FLAGS, balloons, and the uniforms of the men gave an aviation air to the eighth annual Aero Club ball held last evening in the William Penn Hotel.

Col. Harry C. Fry and Mrs. Fry were among the guests, with Mrs. Fry appearing in a gown of black chiffon velvet. Others there were State Inspector of Aviation Lawrence Paurot and Mrs. Paurot, Lieut. Samuel Eaton, commandant at Rodger's Field, and Mrs. Eaton; Capt. and Mrs. Sandels Morrow and Capt. and Mrs. H. Frank McCaffrey.

Mrs. Elsie Brunt was seen wearing beige lace, and Mrs. Jack Thompson turquoise blue velvet. Miss Margaret Eckhart wore black lace, and Miss Mary Myer, pink and blue satin.

Mrs. Thomas Voss chose a gown of metallic cloth and Mrs. Jack Morris, who was there with Capt. Morris, wore black chiffon.

Mrs. Joseph Wilson was in red tulle; Mrs. William Austin, black lace; Miss Harriet Hespenheide in black lace, and Miss Betty Lyons in orchid chiffon. Flame red crepe in the princess mode was worn by Miss Jane Miller.

AT a bridge luncheon being given this afternoon by Miss Martha Wirth, in the Edgewood Country Club, announcement is being made of the engagement of Miss Letitia Dunseath Siemon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Siemon, of Walnut street, to Dr. George Charles Anderson, of Pittsburgh. April 26 is the date chosen for their wedding to take place in New York.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made of the engagement of Miss Betty Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur H. Field, of McMunn avenue, Crafton, to William T. Speer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Speer, of Grand View avenue, Crafton, at a bridge party on Wednesday evening in the home of the Speers.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD CONNOLLY, of Clearview avenue, Crafton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Inez Camille Connolly, to Russell Weaver, son of Mrs. Mary Weaver, of Allentown and Pittsburgh.

STYLISTS PREDICT COATS OF TAN FASHIONABLE FOR SPRING

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, March 8.—It will be easy to acquire a coat of tan this year. Ever so many houses are showing smart little tan coats of tweeds and fine woolens for which many orders have been placed. The tan coat is always popular with the younger generation, who will just adore the neat little tailored coats that will be an important feature of the spring sartorial season.

These coats are of a sensible length for walking, neither too short nor too long, an eloquent testimony to the beauty of the golden medium that is sometimes difficult of achievement in matters pertaining to the mode.

THE new evening frocks continue to pat themselves on the back, for that part of the dress is still of the utmost importance in the design. The front of the silhouette shows very little change, except for a slight blousing at the natural waistline. And so much originality is centered in the back, with especially novel treatments being accorded to the decolletage. Panels, capes, drapes are other features placed to the back of the dress, and many taffeta frocks show bows placed to achieve a slight bustle tendency.

THE gown, recently worn on the stage of the Theatre de la Wichodiere, was chosen to illustrate because of its very intricate decolletage. It is of red faille, the princess bodice fitting snugly over the hips, and ending in a flaring deep flounce which almost touches the floor. And odd little frill, a sort of tail piece, is poised on top of the flounce at the center of the back. The center panel of the deep decolletage is caught up and held in place by a necklace of strass.

THE coat is a clever and youthful little affair from the spring collection of Thomas et Leon. It is of beige and tan tweed with a belt, cuff-straps and buttons of dark brown suede. The high waistline is marked by the belt which passes beneath the Norfolk pleats in front and beneath another pleat at the center back.

Changes in Education Sharper, College Club Told by Dr. Leigh

EDUCATION is very much on the move in every first rate higher institution, and the changes in the last 6 or 10 years to suit conditions, theories and the needs of students have been much sharper than those of the previous 20 or 30 years, Dr. Robert Devore Leigh, president of Bennington College, told the College Club yesterday afternoon.

If an institution shows no changes, it probably represents something unfavorable in education, he added.

In former days there was schooling, but on education. Today individual differences and ability are recognized; education is a hopelessly retail process; attention is now paid to the whole human being, his health and emotions as well as his intellect, he said.

In order to get hard work out of people, work that counts, Dr. Leigh said that work must be based on interest; what a student is doing must have a significance in his own life. There is no real controversy between cultural and vocational education, but between rapid trade training and a deep, broad occupational training.

Dr. Leigh discussed Antioch College, the Experimental College at Wisconsin, Rollins and Sarah Lawrence Colleges, criticising some features, commending others and then led up to a brief mention of Bennington, which is to open September of next year. If Bennington has a central theme it is to make an analysis of what would be good for girls of college age, to teach them something of a serious nature which they like and are good at, and give them a broad and thorough training in it. If they have real ability, they will use it later on no matter along what paths their lives lie, he stated.

Last night Dr. Leigh addressed an invited audience of parents, educators and others interested in the Little Theater at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Eric Von Stroheim Gets Haircut Every A. M. At Film Studio

By DOROTHY HERZOG

HOLLYWOOD, March 8.

ERICH VON STROHEIM gets his hair clipped every A. M. prior to going on the "Three Faces East" set. His own barber in Bev Hills, trails to the studio to do the job.

Apropos of Von Stroheim: His department heads tell that the Aristocrat is making his Talkie debut of his former celluloid best sellers, "Blind Husbands" and "Merry-Go-Round." I recollect Merry-Go-Round with Mary Philbin debuting so auspiciously as the girl and Norman Kerry the chappie. It was a horse that answered alarms regardless of harness . . .

IT'S DIFFICULT enough for Arthur Lake to grow a beard robust enough to merit a shave, much less being sassed by the barber. Arthur swaggered into a barber shop t'other day. During the course of the scrape, he queried the razor-man:

"What do you think of the talkies?"

"Hate 'em!" growled that worthy. And sinisterly, "that's a hint."

Arthur took it.

RECALL OLD DAYS

ACQUAINTANCESHIPS and friendships of early stage days are being revived in Hollywood, what with the arrival of histrionic New York into the colony. Leon Errol and Ned Sparks' reminiscences go back to the road touring era when they hit the small towns in weather that was so cold they had to sit on the hotel stoves to thaw out.

Leon Errol

RENEE TORRES, Raquel Torres' sister, chased her car into a garage to have it fixed. She waited around in a hurry to get it. Finally, after this-and-that conversation, she climaxed:

MUSICAL SHOWS FOR TWO THEATERS NEXT WEEK

Schwab and Mandel, who last sent Pittsburgh "Good News" and "The Desert Song," are sending their latest musical comedy, "Follow Thru," to the Alvin for one week, commencing Monday night. There will be matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The new musical revue "Vanity Fair," starring Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield, opens Monday night in the Nixon. The cast also includes Norma Gallo, young Italian-American dancer, last seen with Clark and McCullough in "The Ramblers." Dave Burns, English comedian, whose first important role in this country was in the "Music Box Revue," Elaine Pring, prima donna; Carl Byal, juvenile; Danny Beck, comedian, and Loretta Campeau.

"The Cat and the Canary" is the mystery thriller to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week.

ELINOR GLYN STORY

"Such Men Are Dangerous," sophisticated drama based on the Elinor Glyn's story, comes to the Penn Monday. The leading roles are portrayed by Warner Baxter and Catherine Hale Owen.

"Song of the West," Warner Brothers' latest all-talking technicolor production, is current in the Warner. It features music by Vincent Youmans and cast including John Boles, Marion Byron, Joe E. Brown, Vivienne Segal and Sam Hardy.

The first two cities in the United States to see "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," Herbert Brenon's latest picture, were Pittsburgh and Chicago. The production opens a second week in the R.K.O. Sheridan Square today.

ZANE GREY TALKIE

Sue Carol is one of the few screen actresses who have never appeared as an extra in a picture. She made her start as a "bit" player in "Is Zat So?" and has been steadily climbing ever since. Miss Carol portrays the leading feminine role in "The Lone Star Ranger," all talking romance of the Southwest, which comes to the Aldine Monday.

"The Melody Man," music and talk film, is the current feature in the Olympic. The cast is headed by John St. Polis, William Collier, Jr., and Alice Day.

"Murder on the Roof," film of mystery and music, opens today on the Harris talk screen. Dorothy Revier heads the cast. There will be a new Victor Graff show on the stage.

GOOD CAST FEATURED IN NEW TALKIE IN ENRIGHT

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

The Enright sports "Slightly Scarlet" as its new talkie. Clive Brook, Evelyn Brent, Paul Lukas (and his accent), Eugene Pallette (with a cheerful "glad hand") and blonde-curled Virginia Booth are there—a fine cast.

Having said so much about all is said. The story is the type with only one possible happy solution, the happy ending. "Slightly Scarlet" ends happily—and sinks to mediocrity.

Clive Brook has not, to my knowledge, done better. A clear voice, plenty of worldly suavity, a note of the sinister, make his part. He contributes the only mystery to the movie.

Evelyn Brent, delightful, has sophisticated "it."

What I've been trying to say is that the movie is poor, but the cast excellent.

Jay Mills almost fixes "Pinin' for the Carolines" by singing it through that megaphone, in the stage show, "Miami Nights." Ruth Ford, swell dancer, dominates it.

Eccentric dancers, Al and Gussie Bloom, have a good act. They have worked out a difficult skit that you'll like.

The Enright orchestra is rapidly becoming about the most entertaining stage band in the city. Good comedy, and good showmanship, are making it popular.

The Heroine

Evelyn Brent is the heroine in "Slightly Scarlet," the new talkie which opened in the Enright yesterday.

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, March 8.

REQUEST

I KNOW the bad in me outweighs the good,
I see my faults as clearly as you do.
And, oh, if I could change myself I would,
But it is rather late to start anew;

I realize that life is not a song,
That realistic things must have their day,
And since I cannot mingle with the throng
No doubt I will be lonely on my way.

So all I ask of you is merely this—
A night or two of gay and bubbling fun,
A word of tenderness—a laughing kiss
And no regrets when our affair is done.

So many lads will crave fidelity.
That surely you can save your lies for me?

—The Perfect Fool.

F-OUL P-LAY A-LLEGED

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS reports in his column that our recent epigram credited to Herbert Bayard Swope was similar to his remark about Peggy Joyce, columned by him in 1921, and which is in his book, "Overset." The book, it appears, is dedicated to Mr. Swope, and what Mr. Adams would like to have us believe is that Mr. Swope read the book.

Walter Winchell

What is more difficult to savvy is why F. P. A. mentions it at this tardy date, considering that since 1924 we have swindled publishers with it four times, having peddled it to this rag and those mags.

Even Heywood Broun has confessed that a columnist who doesn't repeat himself is a coward!

A FORM OF SARCASM

Headline in the esteemed Daily Nooze, "Prince of Wales Hunting Big Game, Catches Malaria!"

THE MORNING MAIL

"Sir," writes Rounder, "I understand that the high spot of that place in Greenwich Village you have been panning lately is a ribald song sung by the plump hostess, part of which goes: 'So the hell with Grover Whalen, Walter Winchell and Jimmy Walker!'"

But "the hell" is poor English! It should be "To hell—"

DIRTY TRICK

AT Madison Square Garden, where the six-day bike race is the current feature, a box was occupied by a group of show folk. Josephine Larkin, of "The International Revue" chorus, and Mr. M. Lachman, Fred Stone's press agent for "Ripples," were seated near the top rail. During one of the sprints a rider collided with the rail and fell. Miss Larkin suffering a slight hand bruise.

When a reporter inquired her name, the alert Mr. Lachman robbed the "International" show of some badly needed publicity by ejaculating: "Her name is Dorothy Stone, of 'Ripples!'"

PROBABLY

Add Definitions of a 6-Day Bike Rider: A guy who very likely sulked every time his mother asked him to run an errand.

BY WAY OF REPORT

A Mr. Martin just telephoned this desk from Pittsburgh. Mr. Martin says he has such confidence in this column he laid 50 to 10 that we were right when we recently said Things-I-Never-Knew-Till-Now—"You can stop payment on a certified check." But when the wager-makers went to the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh the bank asserted that a certified check cannot be stopped.

Well, perhaps the banking laws are different in Pittsburgh. We don't know. At our bank, the Chemical Bank and Trust, Forty-fourth street branch, it was said a certified check can be stopped if the depositor puts up a bond double the amount.

When a bank certifies a check it merely certifies that it has funds in the account sufficient to cover the check and will hold those funds subject to the presentation of that draft. The bank doesn't guarantee any subsequent developments such as the possibility that the check might be forged, or lost, or one gotten under fraudulent circumstances.

So Mr. Martin wins.

GAG

By way of Variety comes the anecdote concerning Carl Hagenbeck, the famous animal dealer. Once he had a row with Mrs. Hagenbeck in the kitchen of their home in Germany, which was adjacent to the zoo. Things waxed too hot for Carl, so he took it on the lam with the Missus hot on his heels. He sought refuge in a cage of 65 lions.

Mrs. H. stood outside the cage brandishing a rolling pin and shouting: "Come out of there, you coward!"

INCIDENTALLY

The yarn recalls the time Variety pounced on Mr. Alber, of Alber's Polar Bears, when that act was four-a-daying it in St. Louis. It appears that Mr. Alber's advertising account with the theatrical weekly was long overdue and on his closing night Variety attached his Polar Bears. "Go ahead!" said Alber, who had no future bookings. "Attach 'em and feed 'em!" Then he walked out of the theater. In fewer words, it cost the rag more to attach and feed the bears than Alber owed.

AFTER ALL THESE YEARS!

The best of the new features in the aforementioned theatrical digest is called "Dusting the Attic," being a series of reviews on entertainers who still are in show business or who have retired from it and progressed. The first concerned Jesse Lasky, we think, who once appeared in vaudeville and who now is a mighty figure in the cinema industry.

The second concerned Vulture Vinchell, and the old write-up (1918) reveals that his girl partner was the whole act. But what we would enjoy more than anything is to have Variety republish that write-up about Fred Allen, now the star of the touring "Little Show."

At the time, Variety said of Allen: ". . . he won't do."

DEMMEN!

The newspapers tell of another hero far greater than Lindbergh. He is the guy who shot another feller for using the phone in a booth too long. When the jury acquits him, and it certainly will, we trust he will proceed to knock off that maniac who makes the revolving door turn at a furious pace. And then murder the reckless and speeding taxi driver, who, when you say: "Hey, there! Not so fast!" indifferently answers: "What's the matter, nervous?"

Soldier's Girl

Vivienne Segal, as a soldier's daughter, also is a soldier's boy friend in "Song of the West," film in the Warner.

THREE FILM VILLAINS PURSUING HEROINE IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Nancy Carroll has a difficult time of it on the Stanley screen in that talkie, "Dangerous Paradise." As the heroine, she has not one, but three, villains pursuing her. Added to this, the hero is such a strange fellow! It takes about six reels before he makes up his mind that he wants her.

The setting is those tropical spots that the movie-makers love to photograph. There is one of those naughty casinos, with Proprietor Warner Oland at your service and at his share of the villany. Nice boy, Oland. While his careworn wife sits in a rocking chair, he plants himself in the heroine's bedroom and waits for her to come in. And is he "mad" when another villain and not the girl appears! He throws the fellow down the stairs.

WELL, WELL—A MURDER

Now, with one murder to its credit, the action sails to a lonely island. And it is here that a grand free-for-all battle and the fadeout clinch occur.

Richard Arlen doesn't display much enthusiasm as the hero—a young fellow, disappointed in love, who seeks seclusion on a deserted isle. Neither does Miss Carroll arouse much sympathy as the heroine, a musical maiden who wishes she were back in the U. S. A. But, anyway, in the name of decency, we are glad it is the hero who gets her at the finale.

AND INDIANS ON STAGE!

From the screen we turn to report on where 10 or 12 Vanishing Americans have vanished to. They are in the United States Indian Reservation Band, a feature of the Warner-Publix revue, "Red Rhythm." Along with them are a silly comedy team, a fellow and girl who exhibit tricks with the lariat and a feminine dancer who does acrobatic dancing with a classical gesture. She's clever.

Preceding the regular revue is a presentation by Dick Powell and his band. It is called "Fifteen Minutes of Whoopee." It is an amateurish effort.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: As a means of helping check the increasing divorce rate should divorce laws be changed so that divorced persons are not allowed to remarry for a certain definite time?

JOHN JONES, house officer, Hotel Henry: "The divorce laws should be kept just as strict as they are now and no changes of a liberal nature should be contemplated. Strictness is the solution to the problem. The laws, it seem, are very easily evaded. I have seen a lot of divorce examples and the matter is a bad thing. It is the children of the couples who evidently suffer."

John Jones

AGNES McWHA, housekeeper, Hotel Henry: "Personally I don't believe in divorce at all. But if changes in the divorce laws would make it harder to remarry, I believe the change would work a great deal of good. It is my opinion that when two persons marry they should stay married for life. They shouldn't think of divorce at all. There are too many divorces as it is."

Miss McWha

ANNA DUDRIK, Southside: "Yes, it is my opinion that the law should be changed, but changed for more liberal grounds on which to get a divorce. The present laws are too stringent. Oft times couples find themselves mismated and it would be a tragedy if they had to live together through their lives in this manner. The best thing is for them to divorce and remarry someone they find suited for themselves."

Miss Dudrik

HARRY SPIROPOLITOS, waiter, Downtown: "In this case I don't think the law should be changed in the least. If a man or woman can't get along with the person they marry, then a divorce should take place. After, that remarriage to someone else suited to their ideals should be the result. And still, if the second marriage doesn't 'click' a third should be tried, until ideals have been found."

H. Spiropolitos

JULIA GIFFORD, North Side: "The more stringent the divorce laws are, the better. There are too many divorces in America in this day and age and they are creating a pernicious influence. A lot of people get married, with little, if any intention of sticking to their vows. A few months or years later they hit the divorce courts. Most marital squabbles can be settled without recourse to the courts."

Miss Gifford

CHARLES G. FAIRFIELD, superintendent, Downtown: "I believe the divorce laws should be as liberal as possible, and that divorced persons should be allowed to marry right away after getting the decree. Therefore, no such change should take place. If two parties find themselves mismated, then the best thing to do is to get a divorce and try the marital venture with someone else."

Will Rogers Says:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 8.

'FRISCO is one of only three distinctive cities left in the U. S., which was built, not just assembled. (San Antone and New Orleans are the others.) Thursday when thousands of police from the White House to Claremore, were fighting the Reds to keep them from marching, Mayor Rolph helped 'em form in line, had his men show them where the City Hall was, fixed a stand for 'em to speak on, thanked 'em for coming to see him, and a good time was had by all, except the women who were unable to get arrested.

But ain't it funny there's only one man in public office in America that had sense of humor enough to kid 'em along. But that's why it's 'Frisco, and why Rolph has been mayor ever since Balboa stumbled over the Pacific.

Dad Gets Chickie to Call On Jake for Advice

CHAPTER XXVIII.

IT was for Jonathan that Chickie went to Jake. She had no thought of drawing a dark thread to complicate the gay pattern of her life.

Jonathan had come to a bitter pass. Night after night for weeks he sat at the table, his head resting heavily on his hands. He shrugged impatiently when Jennie told him he was tired—he must rest.

She made the desserts he liked, patted his shoulder. He scarcely noticed. Sometimes he got up abruptly and left the table.

Jennie dabbed her wet cheeks. "Your father is getting old, Chickie. He won't last—"

"Mother—oh, don't say that! He's only working too hard."

Jennie shook her head mournfully. "No. He's losing heart Chickie, you won't have your father always."

Chickie's lips began to tremble. "Oh, mother, why are you talking like this? Oh, it's terrible!"

Jennie brushed the crumbs from the table to her plate. She kept nodding, immense tears running into her eyes.

As Chickie went through the hall an hour later Jonathan pushed her into her room, closed the door in a hushed, guarded way. He put his finger to his lips. He said distantly: "Mr. Munson doesn't come any more."

"He's been away. Don't you remember?"

House Mortgaged

"Oh, he's been away." Jonathan's tone dropped flat, colorless. "And he's not likely to come back soon?"

"Why—why, Jonathan, what makes you ask?"

He fidgeted with his mustache, lumbering like a schoolboy: "Nothing much. I wanted his advice. He didn't think much of my oil investment?" His big hands were shaking.

"Jonathan! You put more into it? After all he told you?"

He drew himself up ruggedly—giant that he was. "Hush, Chickie! I don't want Jennie to know."

He told her gauntly. His stock had been assessed first for $50, then for $125. He had paid these. Now there was a third levy for $250. In two days he must meet it or lose the $1,375 already invested. He admitted this was the amount of his speculation.

He said, fumbling, "Mr. Munson might tell me what to do."

"He'll tell you not to pay another cent!"

"No!" It rang out grim, fighting. "They'll not do me up! I'll pay! I'll not be frozen out! Why, Chickie, they've got the oil, and they want to get us little fellows out. I'll stick!"

Gradually he admitted that he had mortgaged the cottage, he was heavily in debt, he didn't know where to turn. He had no idea where the money must come from, but pay he would.

He stood at the bureau, leaning heavily on his great fists. He had a white, broken look that caught her heart achingly. She went over and pulled his head down, laying her soft cheek on his. "Jonathan, listen, darling, don't look so. Got me, anyway."

His lips were cold. He said, turning from her, "You'll ask him then, Chickie? You'll see him tomorrow?"

Explains to Jake

The next morning and at noon Chickie walked down the block where Jake had his offices. She loitered near the entrance of the building hoping to encounter him by chance. After lunch she went up through the corridors, passing his door again and again. She kept thinking of Janina's taunt, "A wise boy he is with the ladies. Now you'll run after him." Jake would think that, too.

She hurried back to work, hot with uneasiness. But in the afternoon Jonathan's harried face, the aged, desperate anxiety in his eyes, was an aching burn in her thoughts. He asked her to do this. He asked her to help him.

At a quarter of five she went into the dressing room washed her face and hands. Her eyes were bright with excitement; they gleamed with little amber lights. Let Jake think what he would!

Very carefully she rouged her lips—put a touch of color on her cheeks. She was going to see him—now—

She had a taut, alarmed sensation, as though she were doing a crucial thing. When the girl at the typewriter desk stared at her quietly and asked her name the blood leaped into her face. She had almost said "Chickie."

Her nervousness heightened to pain as the girl announced metallically: "A Miss Bryce is here. Is Mr. Munson in?"

She was ushered immediately into a great room. She heard a soft, exultant laugh. Jake towering over her, flashing with pleasure: "Chickie! You read my thoughts, did you? Here I've been sitting for the last hour thinking of one Helena Bryce. And the dear girl comes to see me. Bless her!"

Without looking up, Chickie said in a strained, protesting tone: "Well, you see I had to come."

"Bless you, you dear!"

Feeling his intent black eyes searching over her face, his hands still clasping hers, she grew tremulous. She said with an eager rush: "Well, you see, Mr. Munson——"

"Not I! Jake, say it."

"Well, you see, Jake, it's about Jonathan. That oil investment of his. He doesn't know what in the world to do. He thought you might know."

As she went stammering through Jonathan's story, tears filled her eyes. Jake patted her hand, shaking his head with a musing, kindly tolerance: "I told him not to. That's the pity—throwing good money after bad."

"Oh! Then you can't do anything?" She drew her hand away.

He caught her arms: "What do you mean, my dear? Give the man a chance. This is a big problem. We'll thrash it out over the dinner table. The Star Oil Refinery, is it? I know the crooks behind it. God bless Jonathan and his oil that he sends my girl to see me!"

"No! I can't go. I have the evening taken." She was almost in a panic. They were going to the theater—she and Barry. She had a new dress to wear. It gave her a joy to be beautiful for him.

Jake laughed: "Some one else, Chickie? So that's what you do when the cat's away? Let him wait! Whet his interest, my dear! And we can't leave our darling Jonathan in the ditch, can we?"

He swept her into the machine; swept her into the restaurant, so tumultuous was his eagerness. She was shaking with uncertainty, glancing about the tables with a quiver of fear. Was this right? What would Barry think? Oh, she wanted so piercingly to measure up to the look in Barry's eyes.

Dine Together

Jake handed her the menu. She glanced at it a long while, not wishing to raise her eyes. He touched her hand, his look so vital, so flashing with spirit it brought a hot stain to her cheeks: "Chickie—this is great. Did you miss me? If it wasn't for Jonathan wouldn't you ever have phoned?"

"Why should I?"

"You sent me away for those miserable weeks. Didn't you want to know if I survived?"

She laughed: "Oh, I trusted you for that!"

"You took something for granted, my dear. I didn't survive. At least I'm terribly afraid that I didn't. Did you think of me at all? Were not you wondering when I got back and this and that about me?"

"Well, Mr. Munson—"

"If you say that again I'll cut your throat."

A laugh rang gaily from her; she felt his magnetism like a sparkling warmth: "Very well, Jake! I need my beautiful throat or else how shall I guzzle all this sumptuous food. But I might tell you that I did wonder. Indeed, I thought it very poor friendship in you to dismiss me so lightly. And I just suffered making myself go to see you today—"

"Ah, Chickie—you don't mean that?"

Jake's Advice

"Yes—I did. And you haven't said a word about Jonathan or given me any advice."

"That's settled, my dear, I'll tip off the fellows at the head of this. I know the strings to pull. Tell Jonathan not to pay that assessment. Some one will come around to buy his stock. He's to sell—"

"Can you do that?"

"Chickie—I can do that. Now ask me to do something else."

"But that's glorious in you. Why, you don't know what it means to my father. It's all his money. Every bit of it."

"Does it give you a kick, Chickie? You're a dear—worrying over other people. Let's talk about ourselves now. I've a box at the opera. I was just thinking of phoning you when in you walk. Come tomorrow night?"

She felt the nerves throbbing even to her fingertips. She said, looking down at her clasped hands: "No, I'm sorry. I Can't."

"When will you? Name the night."

"Oh, I don't know. I'm awfully busy."

"All right, then, my dear. You name the night for the opera. I'll name the nights—seven a week for other things. You don't give me the out that easily." He added, with a wink of malicious mirth: "Chickie, do you think I'm going to stand by and see you throw your life away like that? I'm not!"

Jake drove her home. His car was just leaving. Barry came. He sat at the wheel and stared after the limousine; stared down the block after the limousine was gone.

IT IS almost an inevitable fact that when two or more women get together it is only a matter of minutes when they will start picking flaws in their friends.

And it is not always done unkindly either. They often really and sincerely like the one of whom they are speaking—and the criticisms they are making are often very trivial and forgivable.

Yet it would be very interesting if all of us would once in a while sit down and have that sort of talk with ourselves about ourselves.

We too have lots of little faults. If we could look at them in ourselves as we do in others we could make a great improvement in our own personalities. I shall try.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

The Physician Arrives to Care for Noel

AT Noel's faint whisper of warning about Jack Leslie, every bit of color drained from Mary's face. I had seen that the boy had swooned again as he finished speaking, but I knew that we could do nothing more for him until the physician came, and I left the bedside quickly and measured out some drops of a powerful stimulant from my emergency kit. I was but a few seconds at the task, but even as I returned with it I saw Lillian's hand go out and grasp Mary's arm and heard her voice in purposely rough command:

"Mary! Don't you dare faint! We have enough on hand with Noel. Good girl! Madge!"

I put the potion to Mary's lips and the girl drank it docilely. I saw that she was lashing her flagging will to obedience to Lillian's dictum, and I put my arms about her as she knelt by Noel's bed.

"You're too heavy for me to lift, dearest," I told her, "but I'll help you to get up and over to that big chair. You can watch Noel just as well from there."

She put her hands upon my shoulders and struggled to her feet. But she kept her face turned toward Noel, and when I had settled her in the chair her white lips murmured the terrified query which I already had seen in her eyes.

"Is he—is he—going to—"

I interrupted her swiftly, decisively, although I had no assurance that I was speaking truthfully.

"No, he isn't, but of course we cannot tell how badly he may be hurt. Now pull yourself together, or we shall have to send you into the other apartment, and that will be bad for Noel, as he seems to want you in sight whenever he is conscious."

A long shiver went over her, then she looked up at me with resolute eyes.

"I won't utter a sound," she whispered, "and I'll do anything you say, only don't make me go away."

"That's my own brave girl," I told her tenderly, "and you shall stay right here."

The telephone rang, and when I went to answer it I heard the night operator's voice.

"Dr. Wexham is here in answer to your call."

"Please send him right up." I instructed, and until the ushering bellboy's knock sounded on the door we were silent in the tense waiting which generally precedes the arrival of a medical man.

Dr. Wexham proved to be brisk, brusque and competent. He asked two or three questions, made a thorough examination of the wound upon Noel's head and of the boy's heart and breathing.

"This is the only place he was struck?" he asked, and Mary answered faintly, "Yes," and the physician drew a chair to the bed and sat down watching the inert figure.

"Your first aid dressing was very well done," he said impersonally. "I'll just let it stand for a little. I don't want to disturb him until I see how he's coming out of this."

His manner discouraged questions and not one of us ventured any. But after a minute he spoke again, his own tone interrogative.

"He is suffering from shock—must have had some unnerving experience besides the injury, which is not serious enough to warrant this condition."

I looked at Mary inquiringly, and her stiff lips murmured. "Yes, he did."

Dr. Wexham did not turn his head toward her, but something told me that he had divined her love for Noel, her terror for him, and her remorseful knowledge that in some way yet unexplained she was the cause of his injury.

"I don't think there is any reason for alarm," he said reassuringly, that is I, he can have careful nursing. His general condition is not good, and he needs perfect quiet and skillful care for a week at least. I dislike removing him to a hospital, for he does not need any unusual surgical care. But he does need an experienced nurse—not tonight, especially, but until he recovers. Have you any one you prefer? I can send you an admirable one—unless—of course the accommodations of a hotel—"

"That does not need to enter into the question at all," Lillian said promptly. "Will you excuse Mrs. Graham and me for a minute or two. Then we can answer you."

I followed her into her own room and, as she shut the door, spoke a name with her.

"Katherine!"

"Can you do your work at the farm for a week or two?" Lillian asked.

"Of course, I can," I returned, my heart leaping at this unexpected opportunity to see my boy for longer than a week-end. Not for any necessity of my own would I have interrupted the schedule Katherine and I had laid out for him, but I could not help a guilty little joy that Noel's need should be so happy a chance for me.

Sandwiches

Here's one that the Earl of Sandwich didn't know when he thought up that idea of putting two slices of bread together—with something in between. Yes, a sandwich is the "piece de resistance" of the light refreshment menu, but it must be dainty and it's such a nuisance to cut off the crusts on each one. Not, however, if you take the sandwich loaf in hand and cut off the crusts with a big sharp knife before cutting the bread in thin slices. Then there are no ragged edges on the little sandwiches after they are made.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

From Amazon to Clinging Vine

PUTTING the modern girl back into grandmother's frills and stays and laces and expecting her to look alluring and mysterious is as naive as dressing a 14-year-old boy in his big sister's clothes and expecting him to look coquettish.

* * *

This sudden sartorial metamorphosis which has been sprung upon women is about as effective and convincing as slip- ping dolly's dress over the head of the family cat and tying her feet up in paper bags.

When a girl has spent 18 years acquiring a tennis stroke and an overhand crawl, can you confine her agile arms in elbow laces and have them look as though they belonged there? And can she make them BEHAVE?

* * *

When a girl has been brought up to regard her legs as merely natural supports—something to hike on or swim with—and is as unconscious of "showing" them as a greyhound or a newborn babe, can you shove them under yards of satin and bolts of chiffon and expect them to STAY there?

Won't an unembellished leg or fresh-air limb, with no sex-complexes and no delusions about itself, just naturally come out for air and assume its old "place in the sun?"

* * *

When a girl has spent all her life trying to be a "regular pal," going fifty-fifty on the bills, carrying her own luggage, finding her own tickets, doing her own voting, and standing squarely on her own two oxfords, how can she suddenly soften and melt and shrink into a cozy and blushing Amelia, fluttering behind her fan, or coquetting 'round her curls?

* * *

Well—perhaps she CAN. Woman's adaptability—and changeability—have kept men wondering and worrying and marveling all down through the ages.

* * *

But it will take her a few years to learn to lift her skirts when crossing a muddy street, instead of pulling them down in a wind; to blush and back away instead of dashing in and starting something; to be cryptic and mysterious and elusive, instead of frank and forthright and daring.

* * *

And by the time she has relearned all the old familiar tricks and become charming and "womanly," the fashion dictators will probably come along and put her in chain-armor or khaki breeches—and she'll have to learn to be an Amazon all over again.

From Amazon to siren, from siren to clinging vine, woman's life is one long vaudeville show, with a constant change of bill!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A 'Hothouse' Race

OUT-OF-DOOR life is good for everyone man woman and child. It is vital to the infant.

Sometimes, I think the most wonderful babies in the world are in New York City and in other cities. You see them everywhere, in the parks, in the street, in their carriages, sleeping out-of-doors.

DR. COPELAND

As a matter of fact, you can have just as much fresh air in the city as in the country. And, without fresh air, we are likely to be pretty poor specimens of humanity.

No one can estimate all the beneficial results of sleeping outdoors. Of course, everyone cannot do this, but it is possible for every person to sleep with windows open in summer and winter. Plenty of coverings to keep you warm is all that is needful.

Those of you who have slept out under the stars at night, in the woods, beside a tumbling stream, or on a mountain top, remember the wonderful sense of well-being and buoyancy upon getting up with the birds in the morning. You felt like chopping wood, or walking with seven-league boots, to the ends of the earth. There isn't anything like it.

We who live in this modern world lack much of the stamina and vital sturdiness which characterized our forefathers. Why is it? We are developing into a hothouse race. We live in too warm houses and ride in overheated cars much of the time. We do not exercise enough—do not properly build up our resistance to cold.

Adults should start early in the Fall to train the skin to react normally to different temperatures in the winter months. Hot baths, followed by a cool shower, or cool baths taken in a warm room, promote better circulation in the skin. This helps to harden it to the cold.

Mothers should take great care in the cold months in putting an infant out-of-doors to sleep, to see that the baby is kept warm. There are no limits, within reason, of course, to the coldness of air an infant may breathe without harm, if the body is kept warm.

There are some things that must be taken into consideration in letting the baby sleep out in the cold. The first is his circulation. If a child is strong and has a good circulation, he can withstand the cold far better than the undernourished, frail child who has poor circulation.

Then, it will depend upon the age of the child whether it is well to let it sleep out in cold weather. It is hardly advisable to take a child out until it is at least two months old. A baby under three months old should never be out in a temperature under the freezing point. Judgment must be exercised here. The chief things to consider are extreme cold, dampness and high wind. The sleeping child must be well protected from the elements when he is outdoors.

Winter babies, who are undernourished and anaemic, should be given cod-liver oil and orange juice, together with lots of milk.

When a child has been very warmly wrapped up and is taken indoors it perspires freely. This is a time to be most careful that it does not catch cold. It should have its wraps taken off gradually, a few at a time.

With proper care and nourishment, and all the fresh air possible the year round, your child will grow into more vigorous and healthy childhood and, indeed, the effects of it will reach far into adult life. Good health should be every child's inheritance, and the nearer it gets back to nature, the better for the youngster.

Answers to Health Queries

R. T. V. Q.—What causes bad breath?

A.—This may be due to nasal catarrh, indigestion, diseased tonsils, decayed teeth or constipation.

T. J. D. Q.—What causes bunions?

A.—Bunions are caused by the pressure of the shoe on the joint of the great toe and until this pressure is relieved the bunions cannot be cured. Wearing a broad toed shoe will relieve the trouble in some instances.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Unnecessary Gesture

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We have a friend living in this town who sent us an invitation to the graduation exercises upon her graduation from the high school. This year my son is in the graduating class, this friend has a younger sister who will also graduate in the same class. Would it be proper to send the family an invitation to the exercises, although both families have children who will graduate at the same exercises?

READER.

UNDER the circumstances, I think that if you sent a graduation invitation to these friends who have a daughter in the graduating class, it would seem like "bringing coals to Newcastle." I don't think that I would do this, if I were you.

Formal Costume

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to attend a wedding reception taking place at a hotel at 9 o'clock in the evening. Now which is proper to wear, long or short white gloves? Also must I wear a hat with an evening dress? If so, just what kind? The dress is white, beaded.

READER.

FOR a 9 o'clock evening wedding you would not wear gloves or a hat.

Note of Thanks.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. The girls in my office think that one can use these pretty printed cards for acknowledging gifts such as showers, wedding, engagements and so forth. I still stick to my own idea that one must write a card thanking the giver, regardless of whether the giver lives in the city or not.

2. Won't you please tell me what sort of gifts these printed cards can be used for?

LOUISE.

YES, ma'am, you are right, thoroughly right. For every gift that we receive, we should write a note of thanks. Never should we use the ready-made cards that have been devised for people who are too lazy and especially too unimaginative and inarticulate to write their own thank-you notes. But what an admission is this—to send a card that someone else, someone who has been hired to do this, has written. And then we send this ready-made card to our kind friends who have been so thoughtful as to plan a special gift to make us happy!

2. I know of no sort of gift for which they could be used as a thank-you. No one with the least claim to good breeding would consider using them.

Household Hints

Wash rubber hotwater bottles every two months in water to which a little soda has been added. This prevents them getting hard or perishing.

Watercress should never be bought if it is intermingled with weeds. This indicates that the cress has not been grown in proper watercress beds, but has been pulled up from some overgreen brackish water infested with weeds of all kinds.

If a baked custard has water at the bottom of the dish it is probably because the milk was not slightly warmed before the eggs were added.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN selecting a chapeau, O seeker after pulchritude, remember that the brimless hat throws the feminine face straight out into the public eye. If there are defects of feature or complexion, they are all too apparent. The brim, be it ever so narrow, casts a flattering shadow. Spring hats are going to be brimmier than they have been in the past, and that's a grand idea, since there is no reason why we should wear skull-tight, brain pressing helmets forever.

Before starting the shampoo the scalp should be massaged for three of four minutes. This beauty rite brings the flesh to a glow and helps to loosen any dandruff that may be present. Immediately after the tubbing the scalp should be rubbed briskly again. By friction the blood streams are busied, and it is upon the blood streams that the hair lives and has its being.

ANY dress fitter will testify to the fact that many well-dressed women carry unpleasant body odors. It is an inexcusable offense, and wholly unnecessary. The daily bath, alcohol rubs, living with a soda solution, dusting with boric talcum will all help do away with the odor of perspiration.

A brush or small string mop should be used when dishes are washed if the lady fair would keep her hands in good condition. Rubber gloves should always be worn when heavy work is done about the house—wiping up the kitchen floor or cleaning shelves on which dust has accumulated. A bottle of hand lotion, made of two ounces each of glycerine and rosewater and half a teaspoon of boric acid, is a soothing comfort to little mitts that are subjected to much housework.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows much activity in religious, mystical and cultural associations, but there is presage of sudden changes, delay, postponement and friction in other matters.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a particularly lively year, with new affiliations with large corporations and some financial gain, but also they may have delays and stubborn obstacles to overcome, as well as unwelcome or devastating change.

A child born on this day should be clever, versatile and ambitious, but may need determination and sagacity to reach its goal.

Monday, March 10

MONDAY'S astrological forecast favors those in employment, who should push for promotion, increase and preferment. But they should use personal discretion and precaution in all their dealings and writings.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of advancement in employment and recognition from superiors. They should demean themselves with discretion and sign all manner of writings with precaution.

A child born on this day should make a splendid success in employment or in association with superiors.

FOREIGN TRADE VITAL TO CITY

Pittsburgh Believed to Have $100,000,000 Share In Country's Exports

The Department of Commerce figures for 1929 show the value of exports from the United States to foreign countries was $5,241,000,000 and the value of imports aggregated $4,400,000,000. These figures are compiled from the records of customs in the various ports and a conspicuous geographic feature of this export trade was the increase to South America of 12 per cent.

Exports to North America, Oceania and Africa also show marked gains, while those to Europe and Asia declined slightly. As Pittsburgh is not a port it is impossible to determine accurately the amount which this district contributed to this vast business. A conservative estimate would place the amount at well over $100,000,000.

The products exported from this district are many and varied, but the first in rank according to values are steel products in all forms, electrical equipment and accessories, machinery and tools, food products, aluminum and aluminum products, plate and window glass, glassware, railroad equipment, coal and coke. For the latter, Canada, of course, is our best customer. The chief imports are manganese, tungsten, mica, textiles and materials, food products and many others.

EXPORTS VITAL

The layman scarcely conceives to what extent this vast foreign trade contributes to his prosperity, but it is evident that were this business suddenly stopped the effect on our national prosperity would be tremendous.

The financing incidental to the foreign trade of this district is to a large extent handled by Pittsburgh banks, among which the Mellon National Bank holds a prominent position.

For the purpose of assisting its customers and promoting interest in foreign trade the foreign bureau of the bank was established in 1902. The growth of this bureau has kept pace with the increase of foreign trade and today it is fully equipped to render the exporter and importer complete facilities for the handling of their foreign business. The bank maintains relations with approximately 3,600 correspondent banks located throughout the world and consequently is in close touch with conditions in the principal countries.

FOREIGN SERVICE

Another of the activities of the foreign bureau is the service it offers to the foreign speaking population of Pittsburgh, which numbers approximately 137,000 persons. Among the facilities offered are savings accounts, remittances to families abroad, opening accounts in foreign countries, steamship tickets and other banking accommodations. The personnel is made up of men who speak the various foreign languages and are familiar with the manners and customs abroad, thus insuring to the people from the different countries a complete understanding of their problems.

Michigan Steel to Increase Capacity

Although automotive demands for steel thus far in 1930 have not been up to the record set in 1929, Michigan Steel Corporation has received orders in substantial volume and has been operating at capacity since January 1.

The management is predicting further growth in automotive demands and plans to increase capacity of the company by more than 30 per cent this year.

Text of Hoover Statement Outlining Trade Revival

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Hoover believes that business has "turned the corner" and in his statement issued yesterday, giving the results of a survey of the country, declared the United States will return to normal prosperity within 60 days.

The text of his statement follows:

"The Departments of Commerce and Labor are engaged in the usual monthly survey of business and unemployment, and especially of the results obtained from the measures which have been in progress since the last of November to reduce unemployment and the hardship following the dislocation from the stock exchange crash. The survey is not as yet complete. There are, however, certain conclusions that are evident.

"1—Unemployment amounting to distress is in the main concentrated in 12 states. The authorities in the remaining 36 states indicate only normal seasonal unemployment or that the minor abnormal unemployment is being rapidly absorbed.

"2—The low point of business and employment was the latter part of December and early January. Since that time employment has been slowly increasing and the situation is much better today than at that time.

CONTRACTS INCREASE

"3—Nation-wide response to the request for increased construction and improvement work by public authorities, railroads, utilities and industries is having a most material effect. Construction contracts in these categories in January and February were from 40 per cent to 45 per cent higher than ever known in those months. The total construction work for 1930 seems assured to be larger than even 1929.

"4—The undertakings to maintain wages have been held.

"5—The amount of unemployment is, in proportion to the number of workers, considerably less than one-half (probably only one-third) of that which resulted from the crashes of 1906-08, and 1920-22 at this period of the situation.

"6.—Measures taken to ameliorate interest rates have resulted in continuous decrease since December, and money is available at lower rates for business and commercial purposes. One result is an increasing volume of bond issues have been placed for public improvements. Available money for mortgage purposes of home building and agriculture has lagged behind other forms of credit. But a decrease in demands of policyholders for loans on the insurance companies and the action recently taken by the Federal Reserve System should result in increased supplies of credit, especialy for residential building, which in turn has lagged behind other construction.

SLUMP NEAR END

"7.—All the evidences indicate that the worst effects of the crash upon employment will have been passed during the next 60 days with the amelioration of seasonal unemployment, the gaining strength of other forces and the continued co-operation of the many agencies actively co-operating with the government to restore business and to relieve distress."

NEW ELECTRIC STORE OPENS

The Greater McCausland's store, which has taken over the retail division of the Brown Dorrance Electric Company, was formally opened for business today in Jenkins Arcade. Larger quarters and better facilities to serve Greater Pittsburgh in the electrical appliance and radio field are announced by the management.

The McCausland organization was established here two score years ago.

Pa. Bankshares Reports Gain in Value

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

SECURITIES held by Pennsylvania Bankshares and Securities Corporation at the close of 1929 had a market value $871,003 in excess of their cost. The company's balance sheet showed investments of $5,425,114. These had a market value of $6,296,117.

Net income for the year after all charges was $181,284. After paying dividends on $3,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock a surplus of $31,281 remained. This was equivalent to 15 cents a share on the 206,000 shares of common stock.

The company derived $204,275 of its earnings from dividends on bank stocks. The balance of $1,120 was from interest on bank balances, profit from sale of securities and profit from underwriting operations. Expenses amounted to $24,111.

Income to Increase

J. H. HILLMAN, Jr., president of the company, stated that several of the banks whose securities are held increased their dividend rate at various times during the year, which assures the company of a still greater dividend income during the year.

An analysis of the book values of the stocks of the banks whose securities the company owns shows a continued growth in book value, which should mean further enhancement in value and increased return from investments.

The company did not include in its income account the stocks received as dividends during 1929. This type of income consisted of 100 shares of Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, 225 shares of National Park Bank, of New York, and 273 shares of Peoples-Peoples Pittsburgh Trust Company.

Surplus Increased

THE addition of $31,281 to surplus increased total earned surplus to $72,130. Capital surplus was $2,150,525. The 206,000 shares of common stock were carried on the balance sheet at a stated value of $1 a share. The company had no funded debt.

Total assets at the close of the year amounted to $5,564,369. The only liabilities outside of capital stock amounted to $131,670.

While the company has its principal investments in banks in this district it also has large holdings in institutions in other cities. In addition to small investments, the organization held 21 blocks of securities.

Principal Investments

THE principal investments were 11,198 shares of Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, 3,628 shares of First National Bank at Pittsburgh, 3,055 shares of Colonial Trust Company, 1,500 shares of Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., and 30 shares of Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh.

Among the securities held in out-of-town organizations were 3,512 shares of Irving Trust Company, 1,687 shares of Chase National Bank, 1,500 shares of Chemical Bank and Trust Company, 1,667 shares of Chemical National Associates, Inc., and 1,340 shares of Union Trust Company, of Cleveland.

CRISIS PASSING, HOOVER SAYS

laws governing employment will also assist in the recovery in the months immediately ahead. Secretary of Labor Davis pointed out in a joint survey with Secretary of Commerce Lamont.

SPRING WORK ON FARMS

There is always some unemployment in the cities during the winter months due to the slackening down of farm work, which forces thousands of floating workers into the cities. With the opening of the planting season and spring work on the farms, these floaters drift back to the soil, relieving the congestion in the centers of population, from which spring most complaints of unemployment.

Another 60 days should see enactment of the tariff bill, in the opinion of administration leaders, and they consider that this will have a further stabilizing and encouraging effect on general business. Orders which have been held back until buyers could gauge the trend of the market should be forthcoming within 60 days, and the normal activity of spring in the business world should take care of the rest, according to the views of the President and his advisers.

On the whole, while the business and industrial situation is spotty at this time, Mr. Hoover and his aides are optimistic over the future. They believe the worst is past, and that any movement from now on will be toward improvement.

RETAIL TRADE VOLUME OFF

While general trade conditions are slightly better, the average still appears to be considerably below normal, according to R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review. Retail trade is only in fair volume, with the larger stores doing the major share of the business, principally as the result of liberal advertising and price concessions. Jobbers of dry goods, wearing apparel, millinery and shoes report a slight improvement in demand, although total volume of sales is not up to normal.

There is a slight improvement in the demand for hardware and implements, and machinery sales are showing a slight increase.

Sales of automobiles and accessories are at a slightly higher rate. Conditions in the radio line, due to over-production, are unsettled and the sale of many discontinued lines at reduced prices has affected distribution of standard lines. Groceries and provisions are moving in moderate volume, with prices averaging lower than for a number of years.

Crude oil production has declined slightly and prices are quite low. Production of bituminous coal has fallen off to some extent, with demand quiet and pices showing little change. Western Pennsylvania grades of run of mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1.00 to $1.10.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

SEES GROWTH IN AVIATION INDUSTRY

National Steel Fabric Increases Production To Three Shifts Daily

"The aviation industry is not only firmly entrenched today as a big industry, but it is also forging ahead rapidly for the reason that it offers numerous modern advantages to the nation," said E. L. Benedict, vice president of the National Steel Fabric Company, yesterday.

"Our company realizes this situation and is keeping abreast with this rapidly growing business by devoting our manufacturing and reasearch facilities to the design and production of airport building material requirements. It is not generally known to what extent Pittsburgh has become a real center of activity for the manufacture of many products that are needed in the building up of the aviation business.

LARGEST MAKER

"Take our company as an example. The National Steel Fabric Company is the largest manufacturers of welded steel fabric, which is wire fabric reinforcement. This group of our products is known as national reinforcing and is used extensively in the construction of airport runways and pavements. Then there is our steeltex line for interior plaster, stucco, floors and roofs and for brick and stone veneer work which enters into the construction of airport hangars.

"Throughout the country you will find these Pittsburgh products playing a big part in the successful growth of the aviation industry. Our products were used in the construction of the Ford airport at Dearborn, Mich., in the municipal airport at Wichita, Kan.; another at Tulsa, Okla., and at Abilene, Tex.; at New York and in many other airport developments all over the country.

MARKET LARGER

"Reinforced concrete runways are the ultimate in design for the class A-1 airports. With the impact magnified many times and the smoothness of the runway surface an absolute necessity to both life and property, the prevention of cracks in airport runway surfaces assumes an even greater importance than in ordinary concrete road surfaces.

"The business of our company today is in very good condition. Recently we found it necessary to increase our working time to 23 hours a day, using three complete shifts.

"Pittsburgh, because of its great producing facilities, should logicaly be the aviation manufacturing center of this country. Let us not let the opportunity slip away from us," concluded Mr. Benedict.

Maintain Gas Price At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, March 8.—No cut in retail gasoline prices in stations operated by San Francisco Gasoline Stations, Inc., or Bay Counties gasoline stations, under lease from Standard Oil Company of California is contemplated, according to B. T. Sweney, president of the two companies.

Standard Oil Company officials stated that the company does not regulate the retail price of gasoline in stations which it leases.

January Footwear Production Gains

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Production of footwear by factories reporting to the Department of Commerce for January was 26,147,049 pairs of boots and shoes of all classes against 22,475,482 pairs produced in December, 1929, and 27,245,796 pairs in January, 1929.

Figures show an increase of 16.3 per cent over December, 1929, but a decrease of 4 per cent from January, 1929.

Beaver Falls to Get Steel Firm's Office

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 8.—The Babcock and Wilcox Tube Company will move its general offices here from New York City, it is announced. Only sales offices will be maintained in New York, Pittsburgh and other cities. A new administration building will be erected to house the office force.

ESSEX MODELS NEW THROUGHOUT

NEW ESSEX CHALLENGER TOURING SEDAN ON EXHIBITION IN PITTSBURGH

CHAIN BUYING CUTS COSTS

In a recent interview with P. E. Hassinger, manager of Shearer's service store at 615 Liberty avenue, some very interesting information relative to the operative methods of chain stores was gained.

Mr. Hassinger explained that his company maintains a competent buying staff that regularly visits the great eastern markets in search of needed merchandise that can be bought advantageously and offered to residents of Pittsburgh at prices that represent substantial savings. Mr. Hassinger further stated that his store, being a unit of a nationally known chain, is enabled to offer residents of Pittsburgh economies that would otherwise be impossible.

Mass buying to supply more than 100 stores naturally brings down the cost and the savings effected in this manner are passed on to our customers in the form of lower prices, stated Mr. Hassinger. In addition to mass buying advantages the chain store cuts distribution costs and operating expenses by maintaining central warehouses and offices.

PGH. TERMINAL SHOWS LOSS

The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation reports a deficit for the year ended December 31, 1929, of $696,527 as compared with 1928 deficit of $893,003 and deficit in 1927 of $953,640.

In the annual consolidated statement H. T. Wilson, president, stated:

"The selling price of bituminous coal continued to decline gradually during the year 1929 and reached the lowest level at the end of the year. The total production in the United States increased approximately 25,000,000 tons, being an increase of 5 per cent over the production in the year of 1928. Despite this increase in production, stocks of coal in consumers' bins remained at about the same level during 1929.

"The production in the first six weeks of the year 1930 has continued at about the same rate as during the corresponding period in the year 1929. No decided change has occurred in the selling price since January 1, 1930, but at best the outlook for the year 1930 is uncertain.

"Except for a short period during November and December, your company's mines were operated continuously throughout the year 1929.

"Reductions in operating costs were effected which more than offset the decline in the average price received for its products. All mine plants were maintained in first-class operating condition, and the program of rock-dusting the mines was carried out."

Railroads Lose Bus Line Issue

TRENTON, March 8. — The West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, leased by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Atlantic City Railroad, a subsidiary of the Reading, lost their fight to prevent the Public Service Co-ordinated Transport from operating a continuous line with local stops between Camden and Atlantic City.

Mexican Eagle Oil Production Higher

LONDON, March 8.—Mexican Eagle Oil Company for week ended March 1 produced 277,000 barrels of crude oil against 276,000 in previous week and 283,000 two weeks ago.

Financing High During Past Week

NEW YORK, March 8—New financing during the week ended March 7 aggregated $96,123,000 of which $93,123,000 was in bonds and $3,000,000 in stocks against $1,740,400 in preceding week of which $64,805,000 was in bonds and $6,935,400 in stocks and $166,917,860 in 1929 week of which $145,764,000 was in bonds and $21,153,860 in stocks.

From January 1 to date, bond financing reached $1,044,639,000 against $792,301,250 in 1929 period. Stock financing totaled $64,417,055 compared to $921,961,747 last year.

WESTINGHOUSE EARNS $2.78

Annual report of Westinghouse Air Brake Company for 1929 showed net profit of $8,822,711 or $2.78 a share on the 3,172,111 shares of capital stock. This was identical with earnings reported in the preliminary statement and compared with profit of $6,490,557 or $2.04 a share in 1928.

H. H. Westinghouse, chairman, and A. L. Humphrey, president, in their remarks to stockholders said:

"These earnings do not include your company's equity in the earnings of associated foreign companies but only the dividends received from those companies. The net earnings in the year just closed were exceeded in only two years in the history of the company, 1923, and 1926, excluding the period of the war.

"Consistent with the modern accounting trend to carry patent property at only a nominal book value and completing the program inaugurated in 1928 to write off the book value of patents, an additional $2,450,000 has been written off this year, thereby reducing our patent account to the nominal sum of $1.

"During the year a refund was received from the government of $1,762,119 representing over assessment of federal taxes for years 1917 to 1922 inclusive, with interest, which amount has been carried to surplus account.

"The belief expressed in the report of the previous year that the volume of orders in 1929 would far exceed that of 1928 was fully justified, as the orders received for the company's products in 1929 represented an increase of 41 per cent over the orders for 1928 and the value of unfilled orders on December 31, 1929, was 155 per cent larger than at the first of the year."

Enameled Ware Shipments Down

WASHINGTON, March 8.—January shipments of enamgled sheet metal ware, as reported by 16 manufacturers, comprising approximately 80 per cent of the industry, were 232,092 dozen, valued at $1,149,126, against 391,523 dozens valued at $1,160,801 in December and 427,871 dozens valued at $1,404,048 in January, 1929. Enameled ware included in the summary consists of cooking, household and hospital utensils having a vitreous coat on a sheet steel or iron base and does not include equipment such as stoves, heaters, signs, etc.

TOWN OFFERS RIDES TO ALL

Tomorrow will mark the close of "Challenger Week," during which everyone throughout the entire United States is invited to ride in the Essex Challenger and to compare its performance with other cars.

Essex demonstrating cars will answer phone calls for rides or they may be stopped on the streets.

Greater speed, faster getaway, greater size and improved appearance are claimed by the makers of the new Essex.

ATLANTIC'S NET SETS RECORD

In remarks to stockholders accompanying the annual report of Atlantic Refining Co., J. W. Van Dyke, chairman, states: "Earnings for 1929 were the largest in the history of the company and, while differing but slightly from 1928 earnings, they were nearly twice as great per dollar of invested capital as was the average experience for the years 1924-1928 both inclusive.

"A new high record for cash dividends distributed was established, the total being $5,707,673. The sum of $1,007,798 was used for purchasing 27,300 shares of common stock of the company at a time when they were obtainable at prices far below their book value.

"While in 1929 only about $1,000,000 was used for expanding the several investments in affiliated companies, nearly $19,000,000 was expended for physical properties of various kinds.

"Overproduction led all producers to seek new market outlets for their own goods, disturbing existing individual relations between manufacturers, jobbers and retail distributors and in turn creating new outlet facilities to replace connections that had been severed. Whenever possible we acquired previously existing distributor business but, by force of circumstances, were compelled to a large extent to undertake development and construction.

Franklin Current Deliveries Higher

CLEVELAND, March 7.—Retail deliveries of Franklin cars for March to date are 62 per cent ahead of the same period of last year, the Franklin Automobile Co., reported. Shipping orders on file to date are 250 per cent greater than on the same date last year.

The increase in deliveries the first week in March, follows a gain of 25 per cent in February over the corresponding month of last year.

SCHOOL HEAD TELLS OF RESULTS

Outlines Progress Made By Graduate of Local Accountancy Institution

Watching the progress young men make in getting on in the world is the most fascinating thing about conducting a school, Andrew H. Blass, president of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, said in speaking of some of his former students.

Mr. Blass rightfully derives a keen feeling of satisfaction from having helped many men to rise from the lower walks of life to positions of importance. His institution has established an exceptional record. During the past two years 75 per cent of its students have passed the state examinations for certified public accountants at the first attempt while the general average for Western Pennsylvania was only 40 per cent.

K. G. Wolfe, one of Mr. Blass' students, was working in a machine shop in 1921. He attended a university for a few years and then entered the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy. He graduated in 1926 and passed his C. P. A. examination the same year on the first attempt. He is now secretary and treasurer of the L. B. Foster Company at Carnegie. Between 1921 and 1929 his earning capacity was multiplied several times. Mr. Wolfe is now connected with the faculty of the school from which he graduated.

STARTED AS CLERK

One of the most interesting stories told by Mr. Blass concerns Hugh F. Paul, who came to this country from Scotland and secured a position as cost clerk with the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation. He later secured a position as chief accountant with the Beaver Clay Products Manufacturing Company at New Galilee, O., and started a night course with the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy. He attended school two nights a week, getting home at 2 o'clock in the morning, and then rising early to get to work.

After graduating in 1928 the school employment department placed him as assistant treasurer with the Harmony Creamery Company. At the end of 1929 he became office and credit manager for the entire Liberty Dairy group of companies. He now earns as much in one week as he formerly did in a month with Jones & Laughlin.

Another outstanding success is John G. Reis. When he was working as a clerk in the First National Bank, J. M. DeWerts, the assistant cashier, advised him to enter the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy. After graduation he became connected with the Flexlume Company in charge of bookkeeping. Later he went to Peat, Warwick, Mitchell & Co., certified public accountants. In 1928 he became assistant comptroller of the General Cable Company at Perth Amboy, N. J.

MARKET OPENS MIXED WITH TREND UP

A. M. Byers, Auburn and Radio Gain at Start; Bethlehem at '30 High

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—Price movements were somewhat mixed at the opening of today's stock market, but the main tendency again appeared to be upward. Auburn Auto jumped 3 points on the first sale and American Telephone, A. M. Byers and International Cement advanced a point or more. Bethlehem Steel opened with a block of 5,000 shares at 103⅞, up ⅛, and a new top for the year, and Radio Corporation common opened with a block of 12,000 shares at 50⅜, up ⅜.

Upward price tendencies became more pronounced as trading progressed. President Hoover's statement that all evidence indicates that the worst effects of the stock market crash upon employment will have been passed during the next 60 days was stressed as a bullish factor.

Pools were again active in a wide assortment of specialties. One block of 23,600 shares of Mexican Seaboard Oil changed hands at 2¢, up 3⅛, but the stock quickly dropped more than a point from that level on profit taking. Eastman Kodak, International Business Machines and Peoples Gas advanced about 3 points each, the last two at new highs for the year. American International, Warner Bros. Pictures, International Nickel and Vanadium Steel also reached new high ground for the year.

Early gains of a point or two also were recorded by Columbian Carbon, Coca Cola, J. C. Penney, Gotham Silk Hosiery, Mack Truck, New York Central and Union Pacific.

Lackawanna, Best & Co. and Johns Manville fell back 1 to 2 points.

Foreign exchanges opened firm, with sterling cables quoted 1-16 of a cent at $4.86 3-16, while Spanish pesetas rallied 12 points to 12.18 cents.

'West Cheerier Than the East'—Fleishhacker.

By B. C. FORBES

HERBERT FLEISCHHACKER, leading San Francisco banker, now visiting New York, says that most communities in the Far West don't know that Wall Street had a panic. Conditions and sentiment there are distinctly better than in the East. The introduction of natural gas on a large scale by President Hockenbeamer, of Pacific Gas & Electric, and President Kingsbury, of Standard Oil of California, will supply California with extraordinarily cheap fuel and power and will greatly stimulate the manufacturing growth of the State, Mr. Fleischhacker declares. Oil leaders are getting the situation in hand at last. Far less is heard about unemployment there than in Eastern cities.

Like most visiting financial and business leaders, Mr. Fleischhacker regards the atmosphere in New York's financial world as unwarrantedly depressed.

NEGOTIATIONS are in the initial stages looking toward the merger of the Chase National Bank and the Equitable Trust Company of New York. They may or may not go through.

It is known that Albert H. Wiggin, the Massachusetts minister's son who has been becoming an increasingly important power in the banking world for a generation, regards the Equitable very highly and would derive intense satisfaction were he able to bring it into the Chase's capacious fold. Such a deal would make the Chase easily the largest bank in the world, with deposits of some two billions. The two would not be run as separate organizations, but would become one institution.

So far, no insuperable snags have been struck, but the momentous transaction is quite some distance from completion.

WHY not deport alien Soviets who don't like the way this country is run? If Russia be the Paradise they claim, surely it would be kindness to send them there. By injecting themselves into the unemployment situation in this country, they tend to alienate the sympathy and consideration our unemployed genuinely deserve.

Incidentally, the American Federation of Labor stand is a bulwark of strength which American men of affairs should cordially appreciate.

OUR railroads last year paid $1,103,097 taxes every day. In 1902 railway taxes passed $50,000,000; in 1911, $100,000,000; in 1917, $200,000,000; in 1922, $300,000,000; in 1929, $400,000,000.

"After paying their wage and fuel bills and other operating expenses," says the Railway Age, "1929 taxes consumed the total remaining earnings of the steam lines for 82 days within the year—more than the entire freight revenues derived during the year from the transportation of wheat, corn, passenger automobiles, auto trucks and parts."

VARIOUS states propose to impose a tax on chain store sales. All taxes are, of course, paid by the consumer, so that the burden will fall upon the local citizens rather than upon chain store stockholders.

But the anti-chain sentiment is understandable. Many chain store managements have been woefully short-sighted in their attitude towards local communities. They, too, long held aloof from helpful participation in community activities and in sharing community responsibilities and obligations. The best-managed chains are now striving to remedy that mistake. President Hubert T. Parson, of Woolworth's, pointedly observes:

"People buy where they want to buy. That store, or type of store which best serves the public, will prosper most. The merchant who fails to keep pace with the trend of the times has no one but himself to blame. The chain store manager makes his home in the town where the store is situated; he employs local help; he patronizes local enterprises; his children attend local schools.

"The chain store builds community prosperity by making the towns-people's money go farther. All of our stores support community projects, are heavy contributors to local charity work, and are members of local Chambers of Commerce. Since the chain store's basic policy is to render the greatest service to the greatest number of people, it is inherently sound, and should continue to prosper."

Sentiment won't keep any poorly-managed local "independent" store alive. Efficient, scientific merchandising methods will.

EXPECT quite a number of grand-scale mergers in the near future.

The public has been quiescent for a long time; but there are multiplying symptoms that public sentiment is becoming antagonistic. The disposition now is to blame gigantic combinations for the throwing idle of many workmen and salaried employes.

Also, politicians and regulatory bodies feel that billion-dollar combinations may become too powerful, too arrogant, too dictatorial unless curbed.

"Merge while the merging is good," is now the motto of mergermakers. It is much easier to prevent a proposed merger than to undo an accomplished merger. As the late J. P. Morgan remarked, "You can't unscramble an omelet."

THE stock market having enjoyed a very substantial recovery, a temporary setback would not be illogical, regardless of whether the New York Federal Reserve discount rate be lowered or how cheap money may become.

DISTRIBUTIONS COST PROTEST CHALLENGED

Low Manufacturing Expense Acts as Balance and Cuts Consumer Price, Falk Says

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Gen. Otto H. Falk, president, the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, challenges the chorus of protests which have been raised against the high cost of distributing merchandise. He describes the hackneyed theme as much ado about nothing.

From Gen. Falk's novel viewpoint, high distributing costs go hand in hand with low manufacturing costs, and help ultimately to reduce the prices which consumers pay. He has undertaken to call a halt to the agitation on business convention platforms against wastes of distribution.

"It seems to me that, as a nation," the head of the great machinery manufacturing company, with plant headquarters in Milwaukee insists, "we are solving our distributing problems in the factory. This is only right, for the factory is where most distribution problems originate. Economical manufacturing frequently entails expensive selling, and neither the consumer nor the producer is worse off for it. Indeed, in the long run they are both practically certain to be better off for it."

COSTS SEE-SAW

In summing up the reasons for his conclusions, Gen. Falk, in the Nation's Business, says:

"Distribution costs and factory costs are like the two pans of a balance scale. As factory costs go down, distribution costs tend to go up. As distribution costs are allowed to fall off, production costs are likely to go up just as rapidly. They see-saw across the middle point of price.

"But there is one essential effect on price. It is pushed steadily downward by the variations in level, particularly by the fall of factory cost. With each major drop in the manufacturing cost, the price to the consumer is hammered a little lower, even while the distribution cost climbs."

Gen. Falk's insurgent viewpoint corresponds with the one set forth by Paul M. Mazur, partner of Lehman Brothers and authority on retailing, in his book, "American Prosperity—Its Causes and Consequences." By the way, a new book by Mr. Mazur, entitled "America Looks Abroad," will come from the press later in the month. In his new opus, the young banker sets forth the thesis that in the next decade the main stimulus to business expansion will come from foreign trade.

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, said that the $110,000,000,000 of life insurance in force in the United States and Canada is backed: First, by $19,000,000,000 in cash and securities; second, by 70,000,000 persons who have contracted, directly or indirectly, to pay future premiums; and, third, the power of compound interest.

"Together," Mr. Kingsley explained, "they make that $110,000,000,000 the most vital and useful force in all sociology."

INCREASE RUSSIAN TRADE

Though the American government continues to withhold recognition from Soviet Russia, American business firms and engineers of late have been entering into increasing relationships.

Bernard Knollenberg, New York attorney, who recently went to Russia to study concession conditions for a banking firm, reports: "The concessionaires state that the government has scrupulously lived up to its agreement to facilitate the withdrawal of free profits from Russia at the gold basis of exchange of 1.94 rubles to the dollar. Some of the concessionaires are, however, making special efforts to develop a foreign market, since the building up of foreign bank balances provides the surest and most convenient means of withdrawing available profits from Russia."

With commercial paper rates now lower than bond yields, the further drop this week in discount rates on bankers' acceptances is bullish for high grade investment bonds. Obviously, the important financiers, including the Federal Reserve, are eager for conditions favorable to an improving bond market. The construction industry is especially in position to gain from a decline in long term interest rates.

Incidentally, the current marked easement in money rates indicates that the March 15 tax payment period will be passed without any disturbances. The Federal Reserve has the means and the will to avoid any adverse effects from the temporary huge turnover of funds.

Heavy Bethlehem Buying Revives Rumors of Merger.

LARGE-SCALE buying of Bethlehem Steel stock, which carried it to new high ground on the recovery from the autumn break, was conducted by banking interests closely allied with the management. This situation gave rise to belief that discussions of a merger of Bethlehem and Youngstown Sheet and Tube had been resumed. Such a combination is considered entirely logical in the steel trade, since it would assure Bethlehem's position as the second largest organization in the industry, offsetting the merger plans of other steel interests to a considerable extent.

While continued buying of International Nickel is coming from Montreal, the recent rise in the stock to its best levels since early October was due largely to the operations of a group with headquarters in Wall street. A block of 400,000 shares which has been overhanging the market for several months as the result of a Toronto trader's difficulties, is now believed to have been absorbed.

THE stock market, as measured by the weighed index compiled by the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., on the basis of 50 industrials, 20 rails and 20 utility shares is now at the best levels since the recovery from the November lows got under way. The general average has recovered 47 of the 113.2 points lost on the decline from the September highs, or 41.6 per cent. By groups, it is shown industrials, while not yet having bettered their high of February 5 last, have regained 42.5 points, or 38.2 per cent. of their decline of 111.5 points, while rails have regained 32.6 points of the 117.7 points lost, or 65.2 per cent. The rebound has naturally been sharpest in the utilities, which fell the fastest and farthest. These have regained 95 of the 156.6 points lost, though the percentage recovery is still only 46.5 per cent.

The Steel Corporation will make public its monthly report on unfilled orders at noon on Monday. It is expected that the statement will indicate only a small change from the position revealed at the end of January, when total forward oders on the books amounting to 4,468,710 tons were the largest at any time in four years. The street would not be surprised if a small decreased is shown for February, it being the opinion that the corporation's mills probably shipped out finished steel in an amount somewhat in excess of new business actually received in the period. But those familiar with the situation were disposed to make some allowance for customary month-end adjustments, and in such circles the opinion was ventured that an increase reaching a figure under 100,000 tons might be disclosed.

GENERAL ELECTRIC has obtained its initial order from New York Central in connection with the West Side improvement program. It is probable that other contracts will be coming from time to time. The vast plans of many of the roads in the East must eventually bring substantial orders to the company, although it will be a long time before they are definitely booked. Good buying has been in progress in General Electric.

If the developments in various communities are carried out as planned, there should be considerable business for Bucyrus-Erie, which is the leading producers of steam shovels. This view has been responsible for moderate buying in the stock in anticipation of a move to reflect the prospect of larger sales and earnings in the later months of the year.

February Gasoline Tax Is $2,230,869

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 8.—Collections of gasoline tax during February amounted to $2,230,869, of which $280,680 is returnable to the counties whence collected.

For the eight months from July 1, 1929, to the end of February, the Department of Revenue, which collects the tax from the retail dealers, transmitted a total of $26,565,343 to the state treasury. Of that amount $3,644,192 is to be returned to the counties for road improvement.

THE WHITE HOUSE GANG

By Earle Looker

Roosevelt Schooled Son To Be Appreciative

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son, Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the gang was recruited. The accredited members are Charles (Taffy) Taft, "Brom" Seeley, Dick (Sailor) Chew, Edward (Slats) Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "T. R." the most active member of the gang, Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

Each day, after school, the gang went into a huddle to confound all rules of deportment in high places, mingle in the lives of presidents and policemen, win victories, taste honor, suffer punishments and engage in escapades which were swept along the wires to national publicity. Many exploits of the gang, however, either remain unknown or were known only to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Some there were securely hidden even from them.

CHAPTER IV.

QUENTIN declared himself to be thirsty, and Charlie handed out some lemon drops, but they did not help very much. There was no getting away from the sun. It was blazing hot, we were dripping with perspiration and slowly turning red. Charlie said he was going back through the window, but when he started to do so the awning sagged and slipped him easily and gently back to where he had started. We tried to gather the material in a fist-grip, but our weight and the weight of the pole on the outside edge held the canvas taut.

We were afraid to pull ourselves up on the edges, for they looked tricky, and the sweat came out on the palms of our hands, when we thought of the drop. We all tried crawling, but unsuccessfully. Charlie began the practical thought that, by standing on each other's shoulders, as we lay in the awning, one of us could reach the window-sill, and, finding a rope, or something, could pull up the others in to the room. But Quentin made the horrible suggestion, that the weight of two of us, on the shoulders of the third, might be enough to push the latter off the edge. So we did not try it. It looked as though we would have to lie there and bake, in that sizzling sun. "We oughtn't to be here, you know," Q said, "so we can't just yell for help. And they won't find us until they get an a-p-p-r-o--p-r-i-a-t-i-o-n for a new awning—years and years! If only we could be sure of waving to someone, who'd keep his mouth shut!"

Rescued

Boys Not Punished but Suffer Humiliation

We lay and panted, and thirsted, and starved and fried, and thought and argued. Presently we heard voices, on the south portico under us, saying how cool it was, and how beautiful the view, and so on. We kept perfectly still, lying on our backs with our arms over our faces to shelter our eyes from the sun. Suddenly, conversation below us ceased, and Quentin said, "By buzzard! They're gone! By buzzard!" But help had gone also!

There came a laugh from below us, and we knew, then, someone was pointing up to the three shadows and the three bumps, in the awning above. We wriggled, trying to be more quietly. Then there were calls to us, amid more laughter, to which we did not reply. Presently, some ladies, garbed in summer clothes, grouped themselves in the garden, to look up at us, and Quentin turned over on his bright red face, to hide his embarrassment. Finally, two ushers let down a rope from the window we had used, and ordering us to loop it around our waists for safety, hauled us ignominiously, one by one, through the window. There was no punishment for this exploit: perhaps the highest authority knew we had suffered enough. We had, physically; but our humiliation was even worse.

An Exhibition

President Makes Display Of Gang's Property

In every case, when punishment was due, it fell upon the whole membership of the Gang. TR once mulcted us the contents of our pockets, when he saw they were lumpy, and took the fine on the spot. Itemized, they proved to be: half a dozen large tacks, suitable for sitting on; a couple of yards of red, white and blue cord, either for piping the servants' livery or for tying up important state papers, such as treaties; one quite dead field mouse, awaiting burial; two water pistols, loaded; one Greek coin, ancient; one slingshot and five smooth pebbles; a handbill of a Washington tailor whose trademark was a smiling moon; a one hundred dollar bill of the Confederates States of America; one clay pipe, which looked as though it had been recently smoked; three inches of chain, from a bathroom fixture; one old wallet with a string attached, for dropping on sidewalks and jerking away, when anyone reached to pick it up—and there were other things which I cannot recall.

Remembrance

Unspoken Lessons Recalled, by Boys

TR laid out this collection—including the mouse—on a desk in the Executive Office, and displayed it proudly to all comers. When he returned the objects to us—everything but the mouse, which presumably he caused to be buried, as no mention was made of it—he said: "The exhibition has paid for itself; indeed, it has been shown to some profit because it was generally held to be the best of its particular class in the world. I have had opinion from three senators, five representatives, numerous officers of the Army and Navy, besides one from a po-litical dep-u-tation. The least I can do, is to return these things to their rightful owners, who have been sufficiently punished by being deprived of their use, from the afternoon of one day, to the afternoon of the next."

Punishment and reward, success and failure, happiness and sadness, in real life, have come, inevitably, to members of the Gang, through the years that have followed. But in our early youth, and later, in the red mists and mud of France where Q left us, those unspoken lessons, taught by TR and Mrs. Roosevelt, were remembered amid our greatest trials and deepest distresses. Perhaps this was because the traits which endeared them to us were, deep down within them, so characteristic of that sincerity, which we have grown, all inadequately, to call spiritual.

There was a zestful happiness in their voices which rang clear as a bell, to us; when, interested in our affairs, they spoke to us their words were, by no means, the whole of their utterances. Little boys' ears, mentioned, usually, only with reproof, in connection with a shortage in soap catch most things and our vibrated like tuning forks, to the pitch of TR's and Mrs. Roosevelt's camaraderie which was of an utterly satisfying equality. Their laughter, too, at the times when they, and we were amused, was true, honest, unassuming, and ever a strengthening bond between us. In the opposite extreme—grave moments so dear to the soul of a boy—they could be as solemn as judges. We knew they respected us, and we built upon that. They gave us freedom, which few men and women seem to be able to remember, is the unalienable right of childhood; their punishments, when imposed, we felt to be fair; their understanding of our intentions, and forgiveness—this latter, not always deserved—formed an incentive to every member of the Gang, to hold to his next resolve.

School Life

President Sends Quentin To Public School

Never was there a boy worth his salt, who, at one time or another, was not a member of a gang, with a dark purpose and a secret password. Whether gang headquarters were north, south, east or west; up in the breathless insecurity of an aerie, in the branches of a dizzy tree; in a hut, hidden away in some forbidden wood; in some mysterious, smoke-smudged cavern from whence came funny noises; in a more sophisticated shack, built with stolen packing-cases, behind an advertising billboard, in a city-littered lot, or under the cool, honeysuckle-fragrant south portico of the White House—has mattered not at all. That the Executive Mansion happened to be ours, was nothing more than our unparalleled good fortune.

And, with membership in a gang, comes a boy's first real encounter with his half-real world. Knowing little, greatly daring, like Kipling's puppy, tasting tentatively of the boot-polish, a boy's behavior in many petty trials with his gang, decides some very great adventures which follow. At the time, he is standing upon the shadow-line of his destiny; and very soon, he must tackle reality, using much of the experience, good or bad, his association with his gang taught him. So, as the Roosevelts well knew, the Gang was, and had to be, whether for good or bad.

The genesis of every gang is a mutual gravitation of kindred spirits. Quentin was a fellow classroom prisoner, his wriggling movements mainly compressed, within the compass of his seat and desk, to the surreptitious passing of excruciating notes across the aisle to right and left, to back-scratching, neck-tickling, pin-sticking of the boy directly in front of him, and to receiving the same, in his own person, from the rear. Nor could prison guards, forced by their system to do their duty conscientiously, have applied methods more effective for squeezing his soul thin, than the textbooks provided. That was impossible, of course, as far as Q was concerned, as TR well knew when he sent Quentin, to the Force School; yet his father was determined that his boy should stand on his own feet, in the democratic society of a public school, and that he should, by experience be made appreciative of further advantages, before he received them.

Woe to Q, if his report-card did not bear the authentic signature in the space labeled "The parent or guardian will sign below, and return this report to the teacher," so that, as was printed on the back, ". . . if it is found to contain unsatisfactory markings . . . promptly investigate the matter that the evil may be corrected. . . ."

Thus it came about, in this democracy, that before the organization of the Gang, a series of silent appraisals took place. Boys, more or less unknown to each other, except as they happened to be in the same class, would converge, mutually regard each other with frankness, interest not untempered with suspicion, but with the outward wariness of two terriers, who chance to meet when taking a walk. Then each would turn away and go about his business, with an assumption of carelessness that was nettling on both sides.

P. R. R. OUTLOOK FOR FIRST QUARTER

Lower Carloadings Seen As Indicating Decline In Both Gross and Net

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—With car loadings continuing to fall below those of corresponding weeks of 1929, the Pennsylvania Railroad will show a decrease in both gross and net for the first quarter of 1930. January showed gross of $48,351,408 against $51,664,804 in January, 1929, decrease $3,313,396, and net operating income $5,996,615, against $7,917,089, decrease $1,920,474.

With two holidays and four Sundays February is normally the low point in the year's revenues, and earnings for the past month will fall behind those of the preceding year as indicated by car loadings. With opening of the weather in April and beginning of active building, road building and other construction work, it is expected that car loadings will begin to pick up and that remaining months of year will make favorable comparisons with 1929.

The proposal to be submitted to stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad at annual meeting on April 8 to lease the properties of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad and the Western New York and Pennsylvania Railroad is in line with the policy of the Pennsylvania to further compact its system and reduce the number of operating companies. Considerable progress has already been made along these lines, and further compacting through leases or acquisitions may be expected. If approved by the stockholders the leases of both companies will be made for a term of 999 years, and will become effective July 1, 1930.

The Pennsylvania and affiliated companies own approximately 72 per cent of the capital stock of the West Jersey and over 99 per cent of stock of Western New York and Pennsylvania. Under unified operation it will be possible to render more adequate service to the public, while economies in operation, accounting and financing will also be effected.

Loadings on the Pennsylvania Railroad System since the first of the year compare with 1929 as follows:

| Week ended: | 1930 | 1929 |
|---|---|---|
| February 22 | 147,913 | 154,505 |
| February 15 | 147,456 | 154,504 |
| February 8 | 146,979 | 153,436 |
| February 1 | 142,191 | 148,977 |
| January 25 | 154,653 | 147,979 |
| January 18 | 154,154 | 147,117 |
| January 11 | 154,802 | 143,329 |

HOLDOUT HELPS TO ADVERTISE YANKS

BACK in the days when the brightest stars of the diamond were working for something in the neighborhood of $2,400 a year, old-timers never dreamed that the day would come in baseball when a player would reject as insufficient for a single season's labors a salary $10,000 larger than that of the President of the United States. But that's what Babe Ruth did yesterday when he turned down the Yankee owner's offer of $85,000 for 1930 or $80,000 per season on a two-year contract, insisting that he be given instead a two-year agreement calling for an annual stipend of $85,000.

Babe Ruth.

They'll come to terms in the end, of course. There never has been any doubt of that, and the fact that both have made concessions, after declaring originally that their figures were final, is further assurance of an eventual signing. Baseball needs Ruth, and Ruth needs baseball, and there isn't the slightest possibility that the closing chapter will be anything other than an announcement that "everybody's satisfied."

IN VIEW of that certainty, the continued fuss being made over the situation is becoming wearisome. The attempts to create the impression that both sides are determined to remain firm and that there is danger Col. Jacob Ruppert and Ruth may not reach an understanding is ridiculous. The fact that after yesterday's conference Ruth went out and played on the Yanigan team in the practice game, posed for numerous photographs with Ruppert and joined with the latter in autographing countless baseballs is the tip-off as to the real situation.

In truth, there may possibly be some ground for the suspicion that there is a lot of bunk and ballyhoo behind the whole business on one or both sides, or at least that the parties are not averse to having the reaching of an agreement delayed as long as possible in order that they may get all the advertising they can out of it. The longer it is delayed, the more the Yankees will be talked about and the more Ruth also will be talked about throughout the country.

RUTH gets his big salary each year, not because his ball playing is that much better than that of any other major leaguer, but because he draws it at the gate. Ruppert gets it back in what Babe attracts through the box office, and the more advertising the Bambino is given in the spring the more he will draw during the season.

Ruth must be given anything he wants within reason because he is worth it at the turnstiles. The Babe knows it, and so does Ruppert. So do the other players who must be content to take less, even though it is unfair to them in the sense that without the part they play themselves in keeping the team in the race Babe would not be the card that he is. So there can be only one outcome, and both sides have known that from the start. It's only a question as to the date on which the photographers will be called in to take pictures of the Babe signing his contract.

Mrs. Babe Ruth.

BOB SHAWKEY will not be Ruth's only manager this year. The Babe has another boss in Mrs. Ruth, and reports of the manner in which she is directing his spring training indicate that the Bambino will be unusually fit for the first ball. First of all she took him away from the club's hotel in St. Petersburg and made him take rooms at a country club. "We like the quiet of the surroundings at the country club," she said. "But I'm afraid we are about as popular as measles out there, as the other guests can't understand why we don't mix in their bridge parties and dancing. Babe is a baseball player and the object of our trip to Florida was to get him in the best possible condition.

"WHEN Babe plays cards he goes at it hard, and he never knows when to stop. Looking at cards all night under artificial light is not good for batting eyes. And if he danced with every dowager who wants him as a partner he would wear out his feet and legs before the season opened.

"So our days at the country club are very quiet. We are up mornings by 7 or 8 o'clock. We breakfast simply and take a walk or drive and then go to the baseball park. In the afternoons we have been going around the links, having our dinner early and then retiring to our rooms by 9 or 9:30 o'clock. I have done much of the driving to save him from that strain, too."

ALL the Jewish players in the major baseball circuits this year will be confined to the American League, where Catcher Moe Berg, of the White Sox, Infielder Jimmy Reese, of the Yankees, and Coach Al Schacht, of the Senators, are operating.

There was just one possibility that the National League would have a Jewish player in 1930 to supplant Andy Cohen, and that has faded in the early release of Louis Winer, formerly of Crane College, who was a candidate for a place on the Giant pitching staff.

Frankie Frisch.

REPORTS that Frankie Frisch, Cardinal second baseman, was a holdout, prove to have been only false alarms. Frisch said he merely delayed starting for camp until next Tuesday because he thought it unwise to begin work too early. "You are liable to burn yourself out before the season even starts," he said. "I'll take my contract with me and sign it when I get there. That has been my custom." But the assurance that Frisch is as good as in line solves only one of second-base problems in the big leagues. There is unusual uncertainty about that position almost all around. It develops that ex-Pirate Fresco Thompson is a Philly holdout, the return of George Grantham to the midway for the Buccaneers is the renewal of an earlier experiment in the Pittsburgh lineup and is contingent on Gus Suhr's making good at first base, and it is not settled what players will hold down the post for the Giants, Dodgers, Yankees, White Sox, Senators, Indians or even the world champion A's.

THE Sharkey-Scott fiasco and the huge earnings of Primo Carnera in eight unimportant bouts in this country have revived discussions of the big sums paid to modern boxers for comparatively little ring work and the effect of the same upon the glove game. All of which brings to mind the fact that today is the thirty-seventh anniversary of a sensational fight for which a purse was offered that was the largest on record up to that time.

That was as far as it went, however. It was only offered. Only one-eighth of it was ever paid. The purse was $40,000, winner take all, and the fight was the memorable one between Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Hall in New Orleans on March 8, 1893. Because the gate fell far below expenses in spite of a lot of ballyhoo, the promoter departed hurriedly for parts unknown while the fighters were in the ring, leaving behind a check for $5,000, which was all that Fitzsimmons received for knocking out Hall in the fourth round. Jim Mason, local boxing manager, was one of the Pittsburghers present at that fight and still carries one of the aluminum disks that were issued as souvenirs.

IT DEVELOPED afterward that the return match between the fighters—Fitz had lost to Hall in a previous fake bout in Australia—had been arranged by Charley Mitchell, manager of Hall, and others.

What might have been a gala occasion up at old Duquesne will be just another ball game tonight as the Dukes, knocked out of the running for the Tri-State Conference championship by Geneva Thursday, face Thiel in the closing contest of the 1929-30 Conference schedule. While the Dukes are thinking of the might-have-been as they battle the Lutherans, Pitt's Golden Panthers shift the scene of their activities to Morgantown, there to engage West Virginia in an important Big Four game.

Eddie Baker

Had things gone right for the Dukers Thursday, they would have been playing for the title tonight, and the game, connected with the finals of the second annual state Catholic High School tourney, would have made the occasion on the Bluff a brilliant one indeed. Now it's up to the high schoolers to provide the fun.

PITT FACES TEST

Pitt is up against a tough one, possibly the toughest they have faced in this part of the country this year. West Virginia was beaten here in Pittsburgh in the now famous, or infamous "freeze game" some three weeks back, 21-19. A year ago, the Mountaineers came here and beat Pitt, and then the Panthers went down to Morgantown, and led by Eddie Baker, smacked the sturdy Mountaineers squarely on their pugnacious noses.

A win for Pitt tonight will sew up the Big Four title almost beyond the question of a doubt. It will also stand the Panthers in good stead later on as they make out their claim for the district honors.

HYATT SAYS ADIEU

Charley Hyatt, Paul Zehfuss and Lester Cohen will make their final collegiate appearances in Morgantown tonight, which news will be roundly cheered by the Morgantown folk.

The Tip-Off

Even though there is nothing much at stake in tonight's Thiel-Duke game, the affair promises to be an interesting one. Year after year, the Lutherans come to town with nothing on the ball but a prayer and proceed to give the locals all sorts of trouble. From the way they have been creating favorites this campaign, they figure to make it tough for Chick's club this evening.

The St. Gabriel team of Hazleton, which was the victim of a surprise sock in the state Catholic 1930 tournament on the Bluff yesterday, looked to be better than Central High by 15 points, but too much fancy shooting and not enough set plays and passing brought about its downfall. Strange to say, this team met about the same fate a year ago.

Mike Gallagher was an ace at he directed the play of Central. Dick Shrosbree, former Duke ace, is the Central High coach, but Dick has been seriously ill, so Mike left his cafeteria and took over the reins. He's a pro, however, being as wild and woolly as most basketball coaches.

They tell one on Ed. Thorp, the football referee, who was accused in some circles of not callin' 'em close enough last fall.

Ed was working one of Yale's games in the capacity of field judge. An end end came running down the field for a pass, and the Harvard defensive back, when he saw he was not going to be able to get the ball, clipped the wearer of the blue out from under.

Indignant, the Yale wing arose and complained in the following manner to Ed:

"Hey, did you see what he done to me? Ding you ye ll, I'm asking."

"Did I see it?" Ed came back. "Sure I did. It's time you got out cleaner than a whistle, didn't he?"

Do you know how Mose Lantz, Grove City center last fall, won the moniker of "Farmer?"

It was in a game which Al Stark referees, and with ball game almost over, some monkey in the crowd sounded a whistle that sounded very much like the one the field judge was employing. Lantz grabbed the ball and started down the field toward the Grove City dressing room. Stark took after him, and as they neared the sidelines, Al called:

"Hey, you blankety blank farmer! Come here with that ball."

Lantz turned around, dropped the pigskin and started for Stark. Al figured he was in for a fight, but when Lantz came up to him, he was both surprised and relieved to hear the player exclaim:

"Listen, Mr. Referee, I was never on a farm in my life. I may be a lot of other things, but I ain't no farmer."

Kamm to Quit Holdout Ranks; Off for Camp

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 8. — (AP.) — The White Sox holdout fold, numbering several of their regulars, was decreased by one yesterday with receipt of word that Willie Kamm, third baseman, was leaving the coast for the spring training camp here. Kamm made no mention of salary differences in his telegraphed announcement, but indicated he was ready to pull on the spikes as soon as possible.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Jackie Rodgers, local Negro near-featherweight, scored his eighth straight knockout victory when he stopped Howard Mayberry, Donora veteran, in the third round of their scheduled 10-round windup battle at the Moose Temple last night. Last year, Mayberry scored two victories on points over Rodgers, one at McKeesport and one in the Moose Temple, but all opponents seemingly look alike to the dusky dynamiter these days.

The rearranged and enlarged Moose Temple arena fell short by more than 1,000 of accommodating all of the fans who wanted to see last night's bout. The show was a complete

SECOND ROUND SCHEDULE.

Tonight—New Castle vs. Waynesburg, Pitt Stadium, 8 p. m.

The second round competition in the annual W. P. I. A. L. title elimination tournament gets under way tonight, with New Castle, Section III champions clashing with Waynesburg, leaders in Section XV.

Both New Castle and Waynesburg came through their first round encounters with colors flying. The Section III representatives, who by the way, won the league title some three years ago, downed North Union High 39 to 14 in the opening tussle of the tourney. Waynesburg whipped Hickory, of Section XIV by a 37-23 count to get into the second round.

The first round play was completed last night as Johnny Reed's North Braddock tossers, winners of the Section VIII gonfalon after a play-off game with Rankin, eliminated Fifth Avenue, City League champions, on the Pitt Stadium floor by a 20-18 count.

Fifth Avenue hasn't been hitting well, and came through the annual City League title series with South Hills with a pair of hard earned triumphs. The team failed to click as it should, and Scott of North Braddock, getting away to a 7-1 lead in the opening period, maintained an advantage throughout.

Scott of North Braddock finished on the long end of a 10-4 score at half time. Fifth came back somewhat in the third period to out score Scott by 6 to 4 and cut the lead of the eventual winners to 14-10 as the final quarter opened. The Uptowners rallied

TOURNEY CARDED TODAY

WAYNESBURG, Pa., March 8.—A total of 23 teams have entered the second annual independent basketball tournament to be staged today at Carmichaels. Teams are entered from Washington, Brownsville, Charleroi, Carmichaels, California, Ellsworth, Nineveh, Monongahela, Waynesburg and Mariana.

THREE STARS TO BE OUT OF GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, March 8.—Stars will be on the sidelines this afternoon when Jewel Ens' Regulars clash with Ira Flagstead's Yanigans in the first camp fight of the Pirate season. Catchers Rolly Hemsley and Charley Hargreaves, as well as Outfielder Lloyd Waner, are hors du combat.

Hemsley was painfully hurt yesterday afternoon in the batting practice session. Rolly was working behind the bat when a foul caromed off and struck him on the point of the left shoulder. Hemsley suffered intense pain and then became sick at the stomach. Dr. Jorgensen, the club trainer, declared that the rocket struck the nerve center, thus causing him to become ill. The doctor thinks Rolly will be O. K. in a few days.

HARGREAVES LAME

Charley Hargreaves has been out of action with a lame back for two days and he will remain on the hospital list for some time, while Brother Lloyd is not yet strong enough to perform.

The injuries in the receiving department will make it necessary for Catcher Al Bool to go the entire distance for the first team in the opener. Johnny O'Connell and Hal Finney will catch for the Hooligans, although O'Connell, too, is under a big handicap. The Verona member has a lame throwing arm.

Manager Ens intends to use six young pitchers in the first fracas, three of them to operate in each lineup. The distance is three rounds per pitcher. Leon Chagnon, Martin Lang and W. Meine will work for the Regulars, with Ralph Erickson, Andy Bednar and Herbert Sanders flipping them across for the kid team. Erickson and Lang are southpaws.

IRA YANS' BOSS

Ens stated yesterday that Flagstead would be the boss of the Hooligans from now until the end of the training season here. Ira is a smart, deserving athlete who should get good results out of the youngsters.

For the first time since the players reached Paso Robles, the squad yesterday enjoyed a double workout. Manager Ens certainly did take every advantage of the propitious weather. He worked the lads so long and hard in the morning that they did not bother changing from their battle togs to street clothing to enter the dining room for luncheon. They swarmed into the eating place en masse and shortly after finishing their mid-day repast they sallied forth to the ball orchard for another long drill.

Ens also expects to stage a game tomorrow, but he will confine the activities to workouts on Monday. The townspeople appear to be "het up" over the clubs, so that a big Saturday crowd is looked for this afternoon. Ted McGrew, new National League umpire, is on the job, thus giving the picture a real touch.

ARGENTINES COP

Facts and Fancies About Our New Bucs

NO. 7—BEN SANKEY, SHORTSTOP

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 8.—"I'd like to get a job playin' ball in this heah Coast League," drawled an Alabama youth who is one of the present sensations of the Pirate squad.

"Why do you-all want to play out heah?" asked another lad from Dixie.

"Because they play 200 games a season, and even that ain't enough for me," replied the first speaker.

The little dialogue taking place between the two youngsters brought out a characteristic in Ben Sankey that may prove to be the pivotal trait in his baseball career.

Ben Sankey

Right now it would seem that Ben will not have his wish granted as regards the Coast League. With many of the ways of Joe Cronin and Pie Traynor in his makeup, the new shortstop of the Pirates stands a pretty fair chance of making the leap from Class B to the majors in one bound.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph pointed out as early as last fall that Sankey was an unusual prospect for the Wagnerian role. Ben came up for a short stay near the close of the season; he played in one game, but that contest and a few practice tilts were enough to convince the close observers that here was a lad who romped around like some of those smooth workers who stood out in the years gone by.

Sankey's only professional experience has been with the Selma club of the Southeastern League. He played almost two seasons with that team before the Pirates purchased him. His action in the spring training here has indicated that he may be retained, and if he is kept he will stand a chance at some not too distant date of winning the shortfield job.

A graduate of high school and Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Sankey owns a B. A. degree. The bright young fellow looks like one of those lads for whom a legal or medical career has been mapped out. Asked about his ambitions in these various directions, he remarked:

"I guess it's fine to be a lawyer, a doctor or a big man in some other line, but, if you're asking me what I want to be, I'll tell you—I want to be a major league baseball player and one that plays every day."

That's the same spirit that made big leaguers of Traynor, Cronin, Fresco Thompson and a hundred and one others.—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

SCHEDULE TODAY.

(Final)

Duke Preps vs. Altoona, Duke Gym, 8 p. m.

The second annual state Catholic High School championship basketball tournament, sponsored by Duquesne University and sponsored very well indeed, comes to a close tonight, with two fine teams facing each other for the title the Bishop Boyle trophy and the right to represent this commonwealth in the National Catholic High tourney in Chicago.

Duquesne University's Preparatory School passers, well-coached by Pete Colloti, winners of the upper bracket tilting, meet Catholic High, of Altoona, in the final tonight, and on the basis of the fine basketball they have played during the two past days of competition, rule slight favorites to take up the mantel of champions that adorned the shoulders of North Catholic High, of Philadelphia, last year. The North Catholic team did not defend his honors this year.

PREPS WIN PAIR

Scoring a pair of fine triumphs yesterday, the Preppers won their way into the finals without having an opponent come within six points of holding them even. Altoona, drawing a bye in the first round, defeated a brace of teams yesterday, but not in the convincing fashion that the Prep triumphs were scored.

The Preps defeated St. Leo's of Ashley, Pa., in the second round yesterday morning, winning handily by a 34-21 score, and then, in the evening downed one of the best teams entered in the tourney, the crack St. Stanislaus passers of Erie, Pa. St Stanislaus eliminated St. Francis Preps in a morning game, and many there were who thought the Lake district five would be one of the finalists. The Dukes' 29-22 triumph was therefore, all the more impressive.

ALTOONA TRIUMPHS

Altoona ran wild against St. Mary's, Pa., High in an afternoon clash, winning by 32 to 15. In the evening, however, Central Catholic of Pittsburgh, the surprise team of the meeting, forced Altoona to the limit to eke out a 22-21 triumph.

Central was handled by Mike Gallagher, prominent in Pittsburgh basketball circles, due to the absence because of illness of Coach Dick Shrading. Gallagher directed the local quintet to a 22-21 win in the morning over Gabriel High of Hazleton, Pa.

SIX GAMES PLAYED

Six games were run off yesterday. In the morning, Central beat St. Gabriel 22-21, and St. Stanislaus took St. Francis, 38-18. In the afternoon, the Duke Prep ran over St. Leo's 34-21 and Altoona downed St. Mary's, Pa., 32 to 15. Then in the evening, the Preps and Altoona won their games over St. Stanislaus and Central.

In a consolation game tonight, booked to start at 7 p. m., Central and St. Stanislaus will meet. Yesterday's lineups:

Long's Sport Comment

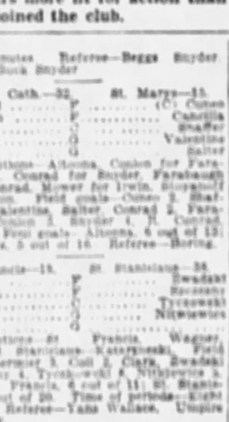
For the purpose of separating the famous Squire Abingdon, wealthy British sportsman, from his bankroll.

Abingdon landed in New York with a letter of credit for $100,000. Mitchell and some gambling associates in this country either had arranged with Hall to lose or knew that he didn't have a chance to win. They posed as the Squire's friends, induced him to bet all his money on Hall by telling him that Fitz had agreed to "lay down," and then, through agents, covered all of Abingdon's wagers.



Bob Fitzsimmons.

HALL was counted out in the fourth round. Whether or not he was in on the betting deal has never been established. One story was that when his handlers held the ammonia bottle under his nose after the count he turned his head the other way, indicating that he had been conscious all the while, but most critics called it a clean knockout. In any event, Hall, who was in no shape, a fact known to Mitchell, took a terrific beating, and never had a look-in. Abingdon was permitted to hold the water bottle and sponge in his corner, but Mitchell did the talking and advising between rounds. There was no heat in the building and a cold wind came through many open windows, with the result that Abingdon, who had stripped off his coat and vest, contracted pneumonia, which caused his death. Not a dollar could be found when his effects were searched, and Mitchell said he was forced to borrow the sum required to send the body back to England for burial. A few weeks later Mitchell and his friends were spending money like water, the explanation offered by Charley being that they had won it in New York gambling houses. Buck Cornelius brought Hall to Pittsburgh two years later for the purpose of matching him with Joe Choynski. Hall spent some time here, and on December 27 and 28, 1895, refereed at an amateur tournament in McKeesport held by the Young Men's Lyceum of that city. He fought his last fight with Choynski on January 20, 1896, at Maspeth, L. I., in which he was knocked out in the thirteenth round. He died in 1913.

PORT ERIE, Ont., March 8.—The Pittsburgh Pirates and the Chicago Hawks will wind up their season series in the National Hockey League here tonight, when they meet in a game originally scheduled to be played in Pittsburgh.

The Hawks, who have scored five successive victories over the Bucs in the present campaign, are strong favorites to sweep the series. At the present time the Chicagoans are deadlocked with the New York Rangers for second place in the American Group standings, and with the playoffs for the Stanley Cup only a couple of weeks away, both clubs are bending every effort to clinch the runner-up berth.

The Steel City puckmen have not engaged in a league fray since last Sunday night, and they arrived here today well rested for the battle. The Bucs are to go from here to Toronto, where they will meet the Leafs on Tuesday. The Pittsburghers have concluded their home schedule and are to finish the season on the road. The probable lineup:

| Pittsburgh. | | Chicago. |

Quite an attractive schedule of games is arranged for the followers of independent and amateur basketball tonight. Topping the unique program is the battle at Columbus Temple between the J. J. Veronas, one of the favorites to win the Allegheny County League championship, and the Ray E. Schneiders, first half champions of the West Penn League. These two teams are sponsored by local aldermen and rivalry between them is keen. It should draw a capacity crowd to Columbus Temple.

Two inter-city contests are on the program tonight, the Y. M. H. A. opposing Akron Y. M. H. A. on the latter's court, while the Pittsburgh Banker All-Stars engage the Cleveland Federal Reserve quintet at Fifth Avenue High School. ## RODGERS STOPS MAYBERRY sellout hours before ringtime and a considerable jam resulted both inside and outside the building as the non-ticket holders sought in vain to obtain the coveted pasteboards. Some offered as high as $10 for a $2 ticket, but could not find a taker.

CROWD OVERFLOWS ARENA

The turnout was a fine tribute to the popularity of Rodgers and his new-found punch. All the world loves a socker, so far as the boxing racket is concerned, and Jackie has punched his way into the hearts of the local fans as no other boxer has since the days of Jack Zivic in the latter's prime. It probably was Jackie's last start in a small club here until such a time as a better man comes along and takes his measure. He is on the big time with a bang and it behooves the Motor Square Club to bring a worthy opponent here for him when he appears in the main bout of its reopening show, March 24. Foes of doubtful caliber are out for Jackie from now on, or should be by order of the boxing commission. He has turned the corner and the fans want to see him against opponents who can give him a fight. He hits too hard for the ordinary run of talent.

The end came after two minutes and 20 seconds of the third round last night, a right hand punch to the head over Mayberry's left lead, dropping Howard flat on his back for the full count. It was some time before the loser could be revived. He had taken a nine count in the second round, after having set the crowd wild by craftily outboxing Rodgers in the first round and keeping out of danger. Leading with a right to the head he had kept Jackie continually off balance and tied him up in close at the start.

END IN SIGHT EARLY

Rodgers, however, did not begin to do any real forcing until the start of the second round, when Mayberry came out covered up and Jackie nailed him with two rights to the head that jolted the veteran and made him seek further cover. Lefts and rights to the body weakened Howard and then a right chop to the jaw delivered at close quarters dropped him face downward for a count of nine. He stalled through to the bell. Rodgers by this time had a mouse swelling under one of his eyes from the punching he had received in the first round.

Rodgers continued the aggressor in the third round, with Mayberry using all of his ringcraft to stave him off. Howard, weakening fast, finally got to pawing with his left and Rodgers then moved in and shot his right over it to the head for the finishing punch, a clean-cut knockout.

Rodgers came in a pound and a half overweight at 3 p. m., scaling 124 pounds and losing a $50 forfeit. Mayberry weighed only 120½.

GRIER BEATS DeNERI

Rosy Grier, Negro, of Canton, O., 127¼ pounds, won the referee's decision over Jack DeNeri, of the North Side, 126, in a messy six-round semi-final, made so by DeNeri's clownish jumping tactics. Judge Frank Brown voted for DeNeri, and the referee and Judge Frank Ferris rightly for Grier, who was the aggressor and did the cleaner punching throughout.

Billy Scholes, North Side milk wagon driver, upset the dope by returning to the ring after an absence of several years and winning handily over Peaches Gallagher, of Swissvale, in the second bout. Gallagher won only the second round against his muscular but aggressive opponent, who repeatedly beat him to the punch. Scholes weighed 131¾ pounds and Gallagher 132¼. Both judges agreed on Scholes as the winner, while the referee voted it a draw.

PARIS WINS, GETS DRAW

Sammy Paris, of the Hill, 124¾ pounds, easily outgeneraled and outscored Johnny Montabano, of Braddock, 126¼ pounds, in the six-round opener, but all of the officials voted for a draw.

Al Grayber refereed all of the bouts. Max D. Zaugschmidt, of McKeesport, was the timer, and Bill Schuster the announcer. It was announced that Tom Malco and Young Saylor will box the main bout at the Moose Club next Friday night. Jackie Rodgers was presented a large floral piece in the ring before the main bout, a gift from his well-wishers.

Sport Vignettes

Bartley Madden, the "iron man" heavyweight, who died the other day in a fall of 28 feet from the steps of the Treasury Building in Washington, was one of the real gamesters of the ring.....He fought 'em all in his time, and Gene Tunney was the first man to officially knock him out.....Gene rates him along with the late Harry Greb, of Pittsburgh, as one of the gamest men he ever met.....Greb really stopped Madden before Tunney turned the trick, but it didn't count. It happened in a bout in Buffalo.....Harry knocked Bartley completely out of the ring in the first round and Madden was unable to return inside the count of 10, but they let him make a fresh start and he went the route.....Bartley boxed in Pittsburgh only once, against Greb on an Irish Fund benefit card.....Fred Fulton and a tanker were on the same bill.....It was staged in Motor Square Garden.....Bartley was Irish and all heart.....He wasn't much of a fighter, but he could "take it" and prided himself on this score.....He was born in Ireland and styled himself the Irish champion.....He was 41 years old when he died.....Doc Carlson, Pitt's basketball coach, tells a good story about his team's crucial game with Temple College in Philadelphia Tuesday night, which the Panthers won, 40 to 28.....His team was "on" and took over the brilliant Philadelphians in handy style.....Just before the finish of the battle, with a safe lead, Carlson took out his regular lineup and inserted his second team.....The subs got hot at once and played rings around the tiring opposition, which led a bird in the crowd to pipe up: "Gee, they just sent in the FIRST team!".....If Pitt knocks off West Virginia on the Mountaineers' own floor at Morgantown, W. Va., tonight, the Panthers will have a fine claim to the national title again, as they have only two comparatively easy games remaining and have lost only to Syracuse in a tough schedule.....Bunny Buntach and Johnny Deutsch, managers of Big Boy George Panka and Harry Williams, respectively, local heavyweight rivals, almost came to blows as they signed for the meeting between their men carded for Duquesne Garden next Wednesday night.....Williams and Panka have met twice at the Moose Temple in 10-round bouts, each of which was ruled a draw.....They step at a fast pace for big fellows.....Battling Gizzy, Washington (Pa.) featherweight, is a game guy.....He boxed Joey Powell, of Philadelphia, at Johnstown a week ago with an infected tooth raising the dickens with him and injured his right hand in a fall from the ring in a late round and three nights later, with both ailments, took on Eddie O'Dowd at Wheeling, knocking him out in four rounds.....The spirit was willing, but the flesh was weak, and he had to call off a match with Young Corsey at New Brighton three nights after the Wheeling affair.—HARRY KECK.

Marco Tells of Dragon
How Marco's timely tale saves an old man from the humiliating fate of going to the poor house will be related.
Ludwig, one of the principals in the sketch, is honored by Duke Louis and expects a visit from the court. His wife is ashamed of the grandfather, once a wood carver of great prominence, so they plan to send him to a poor house. The flute is heard and Marco appears.
He tells them of the wood carver of Munich whose home is to be torn down to make room for the Duchess' gardens. As he leaves, he kneels before the statue of Saint George and the Dragon. A miracle happens. The Dragon lifts the golden casque from the head of the saint and throws it at the feet of the old man.
When he tells the chief gardener of the miracle, he is accused of being a thief. The Duchess inquires about the commotion and becomes indignant when she hears the story. The miracle is repeated and this time the golden shield is thrown down. The Duchess is contrite and orders due honors paid the old man.
As the tale ends the ducal party approaches and Ludwig's wife is again heard reproaching the old man, but this time for not straying himself in his fine doublet and hose. She fetches her errand chain for him.

Thomas, Chisox Star, Loses Race With Death

BALTIMORE, March 8.—(AP.)—Tommy Thomas, Chicago White Sox pitcher, has lost his race with death, which yesterday claimed the life of his father, Alphonse, here. The hurler left San Antonio, Tex., where the Sox are in training, early Thursday and went by train to Montgomery, Ala., and there took an airplane, which was unable to proceed further than Atlanta, Go., because of the fog. He resumed his trip by train and arrived this morning.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

EXPECT WEEKLY GAINS IN STEEL

YOUNGSTOWN O March 8 —Following a five per cent drop in production schedules this week there will be moderate gains next week in Valley Iron and Steel Company operations However all of the lost ground will not be regained at once and there will be some irregular spots next week. Producers expect however that by the middle of March the industry will again reach a 75 per cent operating rate

First quarter earnings of the leading independents in this district, it is estimated will average 50 to 60 per cent of the figures reported for the same quarter 1929. However profits will be sufficient in most cases for quarterly dividend requirements with some balance for surplus

The industry is taking a somewhat firmer price stand for next quarter, but it is considered doubtful if shipments will carry a much higher price than for the present

The Newton Steel Company is showing substantial improvement in production and shipments to date as compared with the final quarter of last year its production averaging 75 to 80 per cent against 40 per cent in 1929's final quarter.

Makers of flat-rolled steels are also experiencing improved business, and the Warren plant of Republic Iron and Steel is on a much better basis than in November-December.

Sugar Companies Advance Prices

NEW YORK March 8 The American National and subsidiary Sugar companies have advanced refined sugar to 5 cents per pound.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Business Proposition

A MAN came up the path that led to Walton's Pond and he seemed to be thoroughly amused, or perhaps his was just a naturally happy personality.

Beatrice Walton was standing on the side terrace of the little country place in Connecticut that had belonged to her maiden aunt; she was frowning. She had reason to frown.

The laughing man came nearer. He made her think of the story about the happiest man in the world not having a shirt to his back. This man had no shirt—in place of it was a tattered jersey. It seemed that at almost any moment the uppers of his rusty shoes would part company with the flapping soles.

There was a frayed coat over his arm. His trousers were torn in places and crudely patched in others. There were holes in the felt hat set jauntily on one side of his head—holes through which bits of wavy and tawn hair could be seen.

But despite this he was young and clean shaven.

Bee—all her friends called her that—watched him approach and thought that modern tramps always carried soap and razor and did occasionally shave.

He saw her and slipped his sleeveless arms into the coat. Then he lifted his hat and indicated the boxed-in chain lift well.

"May I help myself to water?" he asked.

"Certainly—wait a moment. I think the tin cup is rusty."

"It will be all—"

But Bee had stepped inside the house and brought out a water glass. The tramp accepted it and drew some water. Bee watched him.

"You are a tramp, aren't you?" she asked.

"I am afraid, in these clothes, I cannot claim to be a bloated bondholder," he answered, but there was proper deference in his voice.

"You don't look at all like a broken-down wreck of humanity, you look strong and healthy," Bee said, severely.

"Nor do I look like the pictures in theater programs showing what the well-dressed man wears." He laughed as he said it.

Likes Being Tramp

"Do you like being a tramp?"

"Well, it strikes me as being a care-free sort of life."

"Is it inborn laziness that makes a man into a tramp?" Bee persisted.

"I suppose so, in many instances, Miss, and then again I suppose most tramps have some sort of a pitiful hard-luck story all nicely rehearsed to tell on—well, on occasions like this."

"Tell me the one you have rehearsed."

"Sorry, but I haven't thought up my story yet."

"I suppose you are broke?"

"I could use some money right now—but I'm not begging for any," he finished hastily.

"Are you married?"

"No, Miss."

Bee wished he wouldn't keep smiling in that care-free, mirthful manner.

"Very well—er—what is your name?"

"Abbott—Carl Abbott, what is your name?"

Beatrice hesitated and then smiled.

"Beatrice Walton—I don't mind telling you because I want you to marry me."

The young tramp ceased smiling at once and regarded her warily. He even stepped back a pace.

"I'm not queer in the head, don't be alarmed," Bee said to him.

"I see—it's just a new angle—a new way for the modern girl to get a little thrill—a new form of practical joke or something."

Beatrice Walton studied him a moment.

She sat down on the edge of the terrace in the sun.

"Sit down. I want to talk to you," she said.

"I—I well, there's a lot of the world I haven't seen yet," he answered.

"You are young, there is time enough. And I'm not trying to get a new thrill—this is a business proposition."

He came over and sat down where she indicated.

"If you are serious in wanting me to marry you I'm afraid you haven't much of a head for business, Miss Walton."

"I want you to marry me. I shall then hand you one thousand dollars in cash and you will promptly disappear. You will not come back here—at least not for some years, so that I may divorce you on grounds of desertion—is that clear?"

"Not very, Miss Walton, and I'm afraid you are upset over something—I am afraid you are angry, want to get square with someone and I know you'd regret it."

She's Not Spiteful

"I'm not angry, I do not want to get square or to spite anyone, Mr—er—Abbott. I told you that this was a straight business proposition. As for having regrets—" She hesitated and a bit of coral pink appeared in her cheeks but otherwise she appeared unembarrassed—"there will be the simple ceremony and then you will depart. There will be no consummation."

Abbott looked down at his shabbiness and smiled.

"I understand that much. Probably there is money in it for you if you marry, that's the only reason I can think of why a girl both beautiful and sensible could make such a proposition to a tramp."

"Exactly—it didn't need a Sherlock Holmes to make that deduction. If I am married today I come in for a lot of money."

"Well, since, if I marry you, I am to be promptly kicked out before—immediately after the ceremony, you might at least tell me about the details."

"Then you will? I'll pay you the thousand in cash. I will drive into Stamford and get you a good blue serge suit and—and things so you can appear at the license bureau with me. I will get the thousand from the bank. There will be my lawyer for a witness."

"I've half a mind to go, Miss Walton."

"Please don't fail me. Why make me lose a nice big fortune? It will mean nothing to you—you aren't the type to set up a home and I'll divorce you just as soon as possible—"

She hesitated and stared at him, then she laughed.

"Don't look so frightened—I'll keep my word. I'll let you go at once—don't worry that I shall demand that we start housekeeping."

"That didn't worry me—I was thinking that I'd be unhappy knocking about the country and thinking of the beautiful wife I have—in legal name only."

Business Proposition

"This is a business proposition—no sentiment in it. I suppose I should give you some details. This pretty little country place was left to me by my father's sister. She never married. In her later years she regretted this. I never knew why. When I was a little girl this aunt used to tell me that men meant unhappiness and I would be happier to live single all my days. But she changed and for some years before she died she kept urging me to find a nice man and marry him."

Abbott nodded understandingly.

"So she made a provision in her will that unless you married by a certain date her fortune would go to a home for stray cats—is that it?"

"Not quite, unless you want to be catty and hint that it was the same thing—a home for old ladies gets it unless I am married before I am 23. Tomorrow I shall be 23.

"Come in the house. I want you to write a list of things, size for shoes and socks, your suit size, collar size and the like. I'll be back in an hour with them—and I'll put a thousand dollars in your hand the moment we are married—promise you won't run away?"

"I won't run away. Is it much money? No, never mind that. You might be afraid I'd come back to blackmail you or something."

In two hours she was back. An hour later Carl Abbott was quite a different appearing chap.

They went to the office of Lawyer Perkins where a justice of the peace awaited them. The lawyer and his stenographer were the witnesses. The marriage was duly attested.

Bee and the lawyer went into a huddle. Abbott caught the words, "—probated, entire fortune in your hands—"

He didn't want to listen.

"May I bid you goodby," he interrupted.

Abbott Is Payed

"Wait," cried Bee. She took him out of the office and into the hall.

"Here is the thousand dollars. Go out west and go to work—don't be a tramp always—and remember that I shall always be grateful."

"Thank you, Miss Walton—I mean, Mrs. Abbott," he said, making no promises.

It was the next day that one of those low foreign-make cars drove up to the terrace of the Walton place.

Bee came to the door and stared at the tawny-haired man who got out. Sartorially he was perfect.

"Don't berate me; let me explain," he said.

"Why — you — you are the tramp!" Bee cried, "and this is the way you spend the thousand——"

"That car for a thousand?" he said, reproachfully, and then he went on: "My home is in Washington. I was visiting a married sister in the Berkshires and started on a hike of a few days, something I love to do. I took a swim in a little pond down there. I went across and into a cove. I like long swims. When I got back my clothes were gone, and those you saw me in were left for me."

"You had no right to deceive me——"

"Suppose you run up and visit my sister — Senator Valdron's wife——"

"Why, that's Katie Abbott!"

"I know — I knew you from her picture of you. Run up and visit. You see, I fell in love with you, and if I can't make you fall in love with me I'll disappear and let you have the divorce, but give me a chance."

Bee Waldron Abbott made the visit, and two weeks later they left a note and drove back to the Walton place—for a honeymoon.

Britain Boasts U. S. Will Not Provide Money for Navy

We are sunk low in the scale of nations when British admirals openly boast that they count on the House of Representatives not to vote the money necessary to give the United States a navy equal to England's.

The British admirals are quoted by Edwin L. James, correspondent of the New York Times at the naval conference. In commenting on the radio address of Secretary of the Navy Adams, asking American public opinion to support the expenditures necessary for naval parity, Mr. James said in a London dispatch dated March 2:

"This part of Mr. Adams' speech recalls the talk often heard in London to the effect that the British admirals, as distinct from the British government, WOULD DEPEND MORE ON THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES THAN ON THE SENATE TO PREVENT AMERICA FROM ACHIEVING NAVAL PARITY WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

"Even if the Senate should approve the treaty made here, some British naval experts doubt whether the House will provide the money to build the billion dollars of ships America would have to construct to achieve naval parity with Great Britain by 1936."

WELL, MAYBE THE HOUSE IS LESS PATRIOTIC THAN THE SENATE.

MAYBE THE HOUSE, AT THE DEMAND OF FOREIGNERS, INTERNATIONALISTS AND PACIFISTS, WILL SCUTTLE THE NATION'S DECLARED POLICY OF NAVAL PARITY AND DO WHAT THE BRITISH ADMIRALS WANT AND EXPECT THEM TO DO.

IF THAT HAPPENS, WE SHALL HAVE A VERY DIFFERENT HOUSE WHEN THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS ROLL AROUND AND THE PEOPLE HAVE THEIR SAY.

However, this newspaper is of the opinion that the House of Representatives, like the Senate, is an American and not a British law-making body and that it will demonstrate the fact to the British admirals in no uncertain way.

Moreover, we think the House, the Senate and all intelligent and patriotic citizens are fairly well informed on the source of the un-American pacifistic propaganda now being conducted in this country with the purpose of preventing the United States at all costs from building its navy up to the British level, and incidentally giving the British admirals their strange ideas.

The climax of this propaganda was a cable signed by 1,200 names, sent to the American naval delegation in London, and published in the New York Times of Monday, March 4. The cablegram says: "We protest against any possibility that this policy of reduction may be abandoned." In other words, America must still further decimate her navy even if other nations refuse to follow.

The cable also urges the American delegation to adopt "the principle of joint conference in the case of disputes that might otherwise lead to war." That is, the delegation is urged to agree to a "consultation" or "security" pact, which means joining the League of Nations under another name. Indeed, Josephus Daniels, one of the signers, was frank enough to approve his signature to the cable with these words:

"ALL THESE HALF-WAY MEASURES ARE VALUABLE CHIEFLY BECAUSE THEY LEAD US INTO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS."

Let us see just who it was that composed this cablegram and rounded up the 1,200 signatures. The announced authors were Raymond B. Fosdick, Prof. James T. Shotwell, James G. McDonald and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. Raymond B. Fosdick is CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS ASSOCIATION, WORKING TO GET THE UNITED STATES INTO THE LEAGUE. Mr. Fosdick is also on the advisory council of Frederick W. Peabody's AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FAVORING RECONSIDERATION OF THE WAR DEBTS, the chief debt cancellationist organization of the country.

Prof. James T. Shotwell, of Columbia, on January 9 issued a statement through the League of Nations Association saying:

"SOONER OR LATER THE UNITED STATES WILL BE A PARTNER IN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS. IT MAY NOT THINK SO NOW."

James G. McDonald is a member of the council of the League of Nations Association and is director of the Foreign Policy Association, which last Saturday in a statement asked "WHY DOES THE UNITED STATES WISH TO MAINTAIN A NAVY AS LARGE AS THAT OF BRITAIN" and complained that the United States alone was UNWILLING TO JOIN IN "MACHINERY" TO PUT TEETH IN THE KELLOGG PACT.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of Wars, is a notorious pacifist who has publicly advocated for America to abandon the principle of self-defense as a move in the cause of peace.

A careful check shows that the signers of the cablegram include fifty-six persons publicly identified with the League of Nations Association and five of the advisory council of Peabody's association for canceling Europe's war debts to our government.

This would be an appropriate time for the President and the House of Representatives to let the American people, the American delegation abroad and the British admirals know just where our government stands in this matter.

The people have a right to know whether their government proposes to attend to the security and defense of the United States, or whether it is interested only in assuring continued domination of the seas by Great Britain.

It would be reassuring to hear from the President that he has no sympathy with representations made by foreign and internationalistic and pacifistic sections of our population, broadcast in news and echoed in editorials by the unpatriotic wing of the metropolitan press.

We have a right to know whether the administration intends to slide us into the League of Nations system under cover of a naval conference, and whether the administration is contemplating any form of security pact binding us to consult on how to save imperialistic France from the trouble that it is bringing on its own guilty head—France, which we saved once, only to be called Uncle Shylock when we tried to collect only HALF of the money our government lent France in the hour of its desperation.

Finally, the President might tell us the reason—if there is a reason—why he doesn't recall a delegation which has so far done nothing but convince the London conference, the foreign diplomats, the British admirals and the foreign press that Santa Claus has come to Europe again and if they want anything in the world, America will give it to them.

If the President at this time would speak up and talk United States, the whole country would be grateful to him for it, and he would dispel the dread which has arisen in some narrow minds that his long residence abroad may have prejudiced him in favor of certain European nations.

Interesting Faces

The Great Huxley's Grandson, and His Wife.

MR. AND MRS. ALDOUS HUXLEY. HOW DO THEIR FACES IMPRESS YOU?

The most important thing about this young man, with the wide forehead, his face, perhaps, not too well balanced, is the fact that he is the grandson of the real and very great Huxley, scientist, naturalist, educator of men.

The original Huxley would be interested to see this picture and glance at the writing of his grandson whom you see here. He would not read much of the writing, because he would be little interested in chatter about imperfect human beings and the unimportant things that they do.

Compared with his grandfather's work, the work of young Mr. Huxley, clever as he is, is no more important than the chatter of monkeys in the cage, compared with the work of Buffon, the great naturalist, or Cuvier.

It has been said children represent "the only immortality of which we can be sure." We MAY live hereafter, we may NOT. Religion teaches us about the hereafter, agnostics say it is improbable, atheists say it is absolutely impossible.

We shall all know later, in case we DO live hereafter. If not, the discussion won't make any difference.

If our children and grandchildren represent our only immortality it will be disappointing to many of us. But we shall not know.

This young man with all his cleverness, brilliant, admired by millions that never heard of the real Huxley, would not represent his grandfather's idea of immortality.

Huxley lived for science, to teach, to increase human knowledge.

This younger man lives to be brilliant, clever, as the French put it "pour epater le monde."

What will your grandchildren and great-grandchildren, ten thousand generations hence, be like?

We cannot answer the question. But fortunately study of ancient times teaches us that there is always improvement.

This young man may not be an improvement on his learned grandfather. It would be hard to surpass such a man.

But he is a great improvement on his mother and father of a thousand years ago.

That ancient Huxley grandfather, with a low, hairy brow, protruding chin, powerful shoulders and heavy club, climbing to the top of a rock, cautiously looking for his prey, would not recognize his own descendant in this face with the eye glasses.

As for the beautiful Mrs. Huxley, who was Mademoiselle Maria Nys, the ancient Huxley cave man probably would not believe her to be a real woman.

Constant change, and in the long run always for the BETTER.

There is comfort in that.

Only A Handful

Drawn by Nelson Harding

A tiny group, they rant and rave,
And typify futility,
And incoherently proclaim
A plain impossibility.

With banners bearing doctrines false,
They rush about, a childish band,
When in proportion they appear
As pygmies in a giant hand.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

THIS, we may note, is getting within measurable distance of the sizes of the ultimate units of which living things are made up. A single molecule of protein is somewhere about a thousandth of a micron across, so the body of a single bacteriophage organism cannot contain much more than a thousand protein molecules.

But the living nature of bacteriophage is still a matter of controversy. We may note that all of the ultra-microscopic organisms whose existence has been proved are causers of diseases, and this is but natural; the pain they cause has spurred us to their discovery.

H. G. Wells

It is perfectly possible that there are other kinds living independently in the soil, for example, just as visible bacteria teem everywhere (although the tentative search that has already been made has as yet revealed none). It may be that there is a world of these incredibly minute forms of life, as little suspected as was the world of microbes 300 years ago.

A tantalizing situation! Broad hints of the existence of these creatures, even proof in some cases, and yet no instrument to see them with.

But happily a new method is being worked out, a method by which we can pry into the anatomy of some at least of the larger of these ultramicroscopic creatures. It has been shown that although we cannot see them with any distinctness we can take their photographs.

As recently as 1925, Mr. J. E. Barnard devised a method, demanding the most elaborate apparatus and an infinity of patience and experimental skill, by which we can extend our knowledge a little farther.

It rests on the fact that ultra-violet light has a shorter wavelength than visible light, therefore if objects illuminated under the microscope with ultra-violet light, their images will show finer details than is possible with visible light.

Now ultra-violet light has no action on the retina, so these images cannot be seen, nevertheless, it blackens a negative, so they can be photographed.

The first organisms to be examined in this way were those that cause a disease of the lungs in cattle. The result was surprising. The organisms were found to be not miniature bacteria, but creatures as different from bacteria as bacteria are from protozoa or moulds. Bit by bit, by photographing cultures in different stages of growth, the story of their life-cycle was pieced together.

In the first stage in the cycle that escapes direct observation and passes through filters, the creature is a very minute particle, about one-fifth of a micron across. Apparently these particles can proliferate directly. But they also have a method of multiplication utterly unlike that seen in bacteria.

They swell up into hollow sphere, six or seven times as large—big enough to be seen with a microscope; then little wart-like thickenings appear dotted over the walls of the spheres and detach themselves. These are the particles with which we started. Sometimes the particles remain connected for a time to the parent sphere by means of an incredibly fine thread before they break away.

Sometimes a number of particles and spheres may be found thus connected together. And that is pretty nearly all we know. It is a fascinating story because the creatures are so unlike anything that has yet been seen and fascinating also because it is incomplete, the first step in what must become a profoundly important branch of investigation.

A second step also has been taken: Barnard has photographed similar but even smaller organisms—about a tenth of a micron across—from certain types of cancerous growths of fowls and of men. But whether these organisms are the cause of cancer is a matter that we shall discuss in a later book.

It will be noticed that the creatures which have been photographed in this way are only just beyond the margin of visibility; how far it will be possible to develop the method and reveal yet smaller organisms it is difficult to say.

A corner of the veil that hides these tiny creatures has been raised for an instant, an instant long enough for the click of a camera; the rest, at present, is darkness.

NOW SEE WHO'S THERE

By Herbert Kaufman

THE nominating committee of the Hall of Fame is reserving no niches for any present members of the United States Senate.

If Theodore Roosevelt were still with us, he'd find no difficulty in selecting, from that sordid squabble nest, a dozen additional consecrates for the "hall of shame," to which he so impulsively consigned the late E. H. Harriman.

Th framers of the Constitution intended that the federal upper house should represent the creme de la creme of national vision, capacity and character. They designed to create an assembly where the public might concentrate the impeccable judgment, the supreme genius and the peak ability of the country.

Alexander Hamilton (who feared that the lower branch of Congress would be too susceptible to popular clamor and inclined to expedient, rather than fundamental deliberation), insisted that Senators, like Supreme Court justices, should be elected for life terms, thus removing their opinions from the specious influence of politics and partisan pressure.

HE couldn't put it across—and now see who's there. Count 'em and weep. Look upon the ant hill descendant of that Rock of Gibraltar, which once quartered garrisons of Websters and Clays and Calhouns and Conklins and Tildens and Evarts.

Behold the fruit of the primaries—the culls and windfalls who replace the cultivated and matured judgment of which the separate states recently and proudly confided power of attorney.

Contrast these peewits of 1930 with Morgan, of Alabama; Davis, of Minnesota; Hoar, of Massachusetts; Dolivar, of Iowa; White, of Louisiana; Cockrell, of Missouri; Foraker, of Maryland; Hill, of New York; Fry, of Maine; Culberson, of Texas; Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and Ingalls, of Kansas.

COUNT the log-rollers, pork-swappers, demagogues, common scolds and special "interest" tools playing legislative give-and-take in the seats from which yesterday saw intellectual lightning flash and heard constructive patriotism thunder.

Measure contemporary senatorial competence and character with the same tape-lines that used to estimate the status of candidates, and discover how many pigmies are hidden in the togas the giants wore.

If business expresses disrespect of the Senate's processes and challenges the integrity of its objectives, the Senate need only search its own confused and exasperating record to ascertain the justification.

If a majority of the people are disgusted with and suspicious of the motives which inspire the Senate's tariff jugglings, prohibition attitudes and administration disloyalty, the Senate must lay the onus of responsibility upon its own undignified debates and internecine feuds.

THE Senate has lost sight of its inherent obligation to preserve community rights from sectional selfishness.

The Senate has degenerated into a defender and extender of special privileges.

The Senate has forgotten the duty it owes national coherence and stability, to become an advocate of territorial spites, creeds and treasury grabs.

The Senate is increasingly evincing an antagonistic trend toward executive direction.

In other words, the Senate has finally reached the estate that Hamilton prophetically visioned, when his confreres in the constitutional convention concluded to adopt the Jeffersonian conception instead of the Federalist theory of an upper house.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 8.—Newspaper writers who achieve what is known in the trade as a "by line"—you know, the signed piffle—are targets for many creepy communications. Every syndicated writer has a group of correspondents who bombard him with queer letters.

It is called "nut mail" and, of course, does not include the epistolary cheer that is so welcome, the queries or even those who ring the columnar "I" in red pencil and margin a neat little notation to take a broad running jump off a dock.

"Nut mail" is rarely amusing, for it usually comes from those with discorded minds. They babble of fancied grievances and are jumpy and incoherent. Some have a panacea for the ills of the world and others are being held in imaginary bondage.

They tell of inventions of which they have been defrauded or of enemies who lie in wait. For more than five years I have received from one to two missives a week written in a distinguished feminine hand and postmarked from a large Ohio city. They address me as "Buddy."

Although not one has been answered, they speak from time to time of my replies and now and then of telegrams and gifts—imagine?—from me. A correspondent in Nome, Alaska, sent me a postcard daily for more than four months. They were rational and friendly, but never signed.

Bide Dudley for several years received letters from a lady in a nearby New York town. When at last they became threatening he turned them over to postal authorities. The lady was hiding, investigation developed, a progressive paranoia from even members of her family.

Another columnist has for several years received on the first day of each month a brand new $1 bill. It is folded in a plain sheet of paper in an equally plain envelope and addressed on a typewriter. It has never been mailed from the same postoffice station twice.

As the owner of a dog who puts his paw into the handle of a drawer, pulls it open and takes out a rubber ball, I can easily believe a gentleman who writes from Philadelphia that his dog, after an auto ride, rushes up to the front porch and pulls down a switch that turns on the electric lights.
